U.S. Now Turning Out Deadlier Atom Bomb; AEC Has Defense Arm

Expanded Program Rolling, Lilienthal Reports; to Keep Tab On Other Nations

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission reported yesterday that it is now producing a super type bomb, far more powerful than those used on Nagasaki and Hiroshima in 1945—more powerful than those tested at Bikini.

So far eight atomic weapons have been detonated, (1) in the test at Alamogordo, N. M., in July 1945; (2) at Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August, 1945; (3) two tests at Bikini in July, 1946, and (3) three tests at Eniwetok in April and May last year.

"New designs of weapons have been tested and found to be successful," the report by AEC stated. "Further developments are now in progress."

Three Principal Aspects

The production and improvement of atomic weapons, AEC reported, have been "receiving major attention." This has three principal aspects, it said:

1. Production of fissionable materials.
2. Manufacture of weapon components.
3. Development of new designs of weapons.

"Important advances have been made in all these fields in 1948," the report said.

The report revealed that the AEC has its own defense force, including armored vehicles such as tanks, armed airplanes, and guns of various sizes and types. This security force is commanded by Rear Adm. John E. Gingrich, USN.

In an unusual burst of candor, the commission revealed more than it has ever told before under the heading and on the subject: "What is an atomic weapon?"

"The fundamental ingredients of atomic weapons," it said "are the fissionable materials uranium and plutonium. These are heavy metals, which are similar in appearance to ordinary metals. They are nonexplosive in small quantities.

"But an explosion can be produced by bringing sufficiently large masses of fissionable material together rapidly," the report revealed.

Is Exploding Device

"An atomic weapon is a device for doing this.

"There are limitations on the size and weight of an atomic weapon if it is to be carried in an airplane and dropped on a target. It must be capable of being produced in quantity. It must be reliable in performance."

The commission reported that "an expansion of effort in all phases of atomic energy development" is being made both for military and peacetime purposes. In his report and in a news conference, Chairman David E. Lilienthal expressed optimism over the country's progress in this field.

The atomic energy program, he said, is now "really rolling."

Lilienthal emphasized three points:

1. The momentum the three-billion-dollar program has attained, "if sustained . . . will maintain and increase the Nation's lead in atomic energy development."
2. A new office of intelligence has been set up by AEC. Its purpose is to "correlate and evaluate information on foreign atomic energy developments."
3. Continuing efforts are being made to release as much information still held secret as possible, without endangering "common defense and security."

Lilienthal listed several plans for releasing information about atomic energy, which he thinks is essential in a democracy. He

Chemical Element Changed Into Another by 'Hot Atoms'

NYHT News Service

Complete transmutation of a chemical element into another with entirely different characteristics can be effected by "hot" atoms with surprising results, the fifth semiannual report of the Atomic Energy Commission revealed yesterday.

This is comparable to the traditional alchemist's dream of turning base metals into gold, and a step far beyond the breakdown of uranium in nuclear reactors into plutonium, the report noted.

Revealing for the first time hitherto secret details of fission work, the report inaugurated a policy of fuller public information by disclosing advances which may be laying the foundation for far-reaching new theories of the nature of the atom. These discoveries include:

1. A cheap and plentiful substitute for radium in cobalt 60, a radioactive isotope of cobalt which is being studied for use in cancer therapy.
2. How to get cows to produce radioactive milk, and beets to yield radioactive sugar.
3. New information on photosynthesis—the process by which plants use the energy of sunlight to manufacture food.
4. Methods of controlling the proportion of sugars and fats produced through photo-synthesis by simple one-celled plants.
5. Electric currents within the nucleus of the atom.
6. An infinitely more precise standard of measurement than the present platinum bars, in wavelengths of the green mercury vapor arc.
7. A liquid that will flow uphill.

Tobin Urges Quick Passage Of Labor Bill

GOP Assails Measure As Lacking Adequate Enforcement Provisions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin yesterday called for speedy return to "free collective bargaining" without any final Government powers to enjoin strikes.

He asked Congress to pass quickly, without "trivial" amendments, a small-package National Labor Relations Act of 1949, completely displacing the Taft-Hartley Act.

Republicans romped on the bill as lacking enforcement provisions and closed-shop "safeguards" in two hours of baptismal fire before the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Aiken Leads Attack

Led by a "Young Turk" Republican, Senator George D. Aiken (D., Vt.), the GOP Senators opened up when Democratic members paid brief tributes to the bill, then "passed" without questioning. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-author of the old law, mostly held his fire but got permission to "cross-examine" Tobin Wednesday.

Aiken's complaint was this: "The bill has no teeth whatever in it, and relies on moral persuasion. It has no teeth unless you call them false teeth."

He referred to the proposed 30-day cooling off period in national emergency strikes, scrapping Taft-Hartley power for the Government to get 80-day injunctions against such strikes.

"I believe we will find we have the cooperation of management and labor," replied Tobin. "Public opinion is a powerful force."

Others to Testify

"Do you think," asked Aiken, "that Mr. (John L.) Lewis would respond to public opinion better than he did a year or two ago?" asked Aiken.

"We have a different economic situation," said Tobin. "I think the tremendous coal supply would eliminate the possibility you speak of."

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) asked if the President, as 'Chief Executive,' would not still have the power to seize struck plants in a national emergency.

Tobin said he preferred to have the Attorney General's opinion before commenting on that. He told newsmen, however, that there was "nothing in the bill" giving the Government any ultimate powers.

Truman Wants Soviet Action To Back Words

President Prefers That Russia Prove Good Will in U. N.

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman feels that it is up to Russia to substitute action for words—preferably in the United Nations—if she really has "a will for peace."

He is opposed to any Big Two "deals," since, as he has said, the cleavage in the world today is not between the Soviet Union and the United States, but between the Soviet Union and the rest of the world.

He believes, therefore, that any negotiations looking to a more tranquil order should take place before the United Nations; or, if elsewhere, that other countries besides the United States and Russia should be invited.

This, it was stated authoritatively yesterday, is the Chief Executive's position in the face of Premier Stalin's statement that he was willing to consider the issuance of a Big Two declaration that Russia and the United States "have no intention of resorting to war against one another."

Stalin, in answering a questionnaire submitted by the International News Service, also said that he had "no objection" to a meeting with President Truman to discuss a peace pact. But the Russian leader, in his answer, pointed out that he had stated this before.

Mr. Truman has said, perhaps a dozen times, that he would be glad to see Premier Stalin if he should come to Washington. White House Secretary Charles G. Ross said yesterday that this statement still stands.

Actually, nobody in high place has ever seriously envisioned a Truman-Stalin meeting, here or anywhere, without there being a decided change in Russia's conduct.

The most serious obstacle to an accord, as the President sees it, is the fact that Russia's word is no good. He and his lieutenants have publicly read the record of her broken treaties and promises.

Hence, Mr. Truman's insistence on some evidence of good faith by Russia in her role as a member of the United Nations.

It was Russia's broken promises and her expansion into what were regarded as American strategic areas that prompted the Chief Executive to proclaim the Truman Doctrine. This was designed to thwart a Communist puncture of

House Committee On Un-American Activities to Hold Parley With Clark

By the United Press

Chairman John S. Wood announced yesterday that the House Un-American Activities Committee had voted unanimously to bar radio recorders, newsreels, television and news photographers from future committee hearings.

The action was taken at the committee's first meeting since it was overhauled by Democratic congressional leaders in an effort to spike widespread criticism that the group was more interested in publicity than investigations.

Wood also announced that a three-man subcommittee made up of two Democrats and a Republican had been appointed to meet today with Attorney General Tom C. Clark. Wood declined to disclose the purpose of the meeting. But he said previously the committee would like to work in cooperation with the Justice Department, something the old committee didn't do.

Wood said the committee will ask the House for $200,000 to finance its investigations during the coming year, the same amount the old committee had last year.

He declined to discuss the committee's reasons for barring news photographers and picture-taking mediums. In the past, the committee sometimes was criticized for the "circus-like" atmosphere of its sessions.

Whenever important witnesses, such as Whittaker Chambers or Alger Hiss, were questioned, the committee room invariably was jammed with newsreel cameras, photographers and wire recorders.

The new committee also is expected to hold more closed-door meetings than the previous group.

The members of the subcommittee appointed to confer with Clark are Representatives Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.) and Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.).

Telling A-Bomb Total Might Avert War, Senator Says

Detroit, Jan. 31 (AP).—A "disastrous war" might be prevented if the United States tells the world how many atom bombs we have, Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the joint congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, said today. He termed secrecy about atom bomb production "an extraordinary state of affairs."

McMahon said "in the case of atomic energy Congress has purchased a defense package sight unseen. How can Congress and the American people judge defense needs unless they know the size of the atomic stockpile? Perhaps, if that stockpile is large, we do not need to spend as much as we had supposed."

Anti-Fascists Throw Tear Gas At Mosley Rally

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—One hundred persons were given first aid treatment tonight after anti-Fascists threw tear gas bombs into a crowded hall where Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the prewar British Union of Fascists, was holding a meeting.

Some 100 police kept more than 1000 persons from storming the hall, but anti-Fascist organizations demonstrated by torchlight beyond the police cordon.

Storm Moves North

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The worst winter weather in history, which had been concentrating its fury west of the Mississippi and north of Texas, belted the rest of the country yesterday from Maine to Mexico with snow, sleet, cold and rain.

Early yesterday a greater section of the United States was covered with snow than at any time within memory of Weather Bureau experts.

The southern boundary of the snow belt formed a giant circle from Washington, D. C., to southern Texas and central California. Snow, instead of stars, fell on Alabama, and also on Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Arkansas, Tennessee, the Carolinas, and Texas where the storm started.

New Threat in West

Sub-zero cold moved back into the West yesterday after a brief respite Sunday. Just after noon yesterday, western temperatures averaged below 20. Only in southern California, southwestern Arizona and Florida was the mercury over 48 degrees at 2:30 p. m. yesterday.

New snow threatened in the Nevada-Utah area, where a state of emergency has already been declared. Assistant Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, making an on-the-spot investigation of disaster relief in the Western Plains States, said: "I have been informed it is reasonable to anticipate more weeks of bad weather."

Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, field commander of the snow fight, was optimistic about relief results, but added: "The picture can change in a few hours. A ground blizzard in Wyoming could stop us flat."

Despite new subzero temperatures, the Nevada haylift established a new record yesterday, when 29 planes dropped 259,288 pounds of hay to starving, freezing livestock.

New Haylift to Start

Another large haylift operation will start today, weather permitting, between La Junta, Colo., and Casper, Wyo., Maj. Phillips Wachtel, Lowry Air Base public relations officer, said.

Twenty C-47 planes will fly 600 tons of hay—14,400 bales—to Casper in an around-the-clock operation. Fifty three-man air crews will be involved.

The Red Cross announced here it had shifted its snow disaster headquarters from St. Louis to Omaha. It is speeding emergency food to 2000 snowbound Indians in southwest New Mexico and northeastern Nebraska. It planned to drop the food from planes.

The Omaha Red Cross office said it was trying to establish contact with five Indian reservations in the Dakotas "where the situation is becoming increasingly serious." The organization also prepared to evacuate or fly in doctors for 17 expectant mothers in Pierce County, Nebr.

Dr. W. P. Higgins of Albion, Nebr., flew to Cedar Rapids, Nebr., today to investigate a report that the town of 700 was without food or milk, the Red Cross said.

Hoover Would Let President Reorganize

Change in Framework 'Grievously Needed,' He Tells Committee

Former President Herbert Hoover yesterday urged that President Truman be granted power to reorganize the executive branch of the Government, with no agencies exempt from such reorganization.

Reorganization, he pleaded, is "grievously needed" to secure "efficiency and economy." Savings, he said, "should be considerable," adding that the "cost of Government is too high."

"I'm not accusing anyone," he said, "because our form of organization is hopeless by way of economy."

When asked by Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.), "Are the taxpayers going to be able to stand the load?" he replied:

"I believe the country has reached the saturation point as to taxation."

Hoover added: "I strongly support the idea of no exemptions in this bill. There is no merit in exemptions to start with."

His testimony before the House Committee on Expenditures brought an immediate demand by Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee that the reorganization bill Hoover approved give special treatment to the armed services.

Vinson urgently pleaded with the Expenditures Committee to adopt an amendment providing that any reorganization affecting any of the armed services should be offered in a bill entirely separate from any other reorganization plan.

He said he was making his plea

Recognition Given Israel, Trans-Jordan

By The Associated Press

President Truman welcomed Israel into the world family of nations yesterday by granting it full-fledged American recognition.

At the same time, he extended United States recognition to the British-supported Arab kingdom of Trans-Jordan.

The White House made separate announcements of the two actions. This emphasized the official American position that there has been no "deal" with the British to trade American recognition of Trans-Jordan for British recognition of Israel.

Britain in effect reversed its policy last Friday by granting Israel limited, or "de facto," recognition. Foreign Minister Bevin told the House of Commons a few days earlier the American decision to recognize Trans-Jordan materially influenced Britain's action.

The American announcement of full, or "de jure," recognition for the new Jewish state fulfilled a promise made by President Truman during the election campaign some three months ago.

On October 24 the President pledged full American recognition of Israel once it held free elections to choose a Parliament and establishlish as permanent the provisional regime then in effect.

The elections were held last Wednesday, with nearly 90 per cent of those eligible voting. The results assured continuance of the pro-American government headed by Premier David Ben Gurion

44,000 D. C. Housing Units Termed Unfit

NCHA Report Urges Funds for Building 5500 to Be Rented

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

There are more than 44,000 occupied, substandard dwellings in the District which "should be removed or extensively rebuilt," the National Capital Housing Authority declared yesterday in an annual report to President Truman.

In the report—bristling with criticism of private industry and Congress for failing to provide new low-rent rental housing—NCHA said:

"Today, more than three years after the close of the war, housing conditions for the low-income part of the District's population are worse than either before or during the war.

The 58-page report was on NCHA operations during the year ending last July 1.

The housing authority repeated its request for funds and permission to build 5500 permanent dwelling units for rent to low income families in the District who are now "living lives of tragedy."

John Ihlder, executive officer of NCHA, said that unless housing relief for low-income families is provided in outlying, sparsely settled sites, "planning and redevelopment agencies will have no alternative than to encourage the building of tall, multifamily tenements."

"And to follow that precedent set by New York City over 100 years ago," Ihlder added, "would seem incredible."

The report also revealed that:

1. Eighteen thousand low-income families, 5600 of which are veterans, are now on the NCHA waiting list for housing. Many have been waiting since 1941.

Investigations further showed that their waiting list included families presently living in cellars, tin garages and on boarded up porches.

2. There are between 45,000 and 50,000 families in the District with incomes of $2310 or less. No houses are being built for these

To Save Cost of New Building

Park View School Shift to Use By Negroes Asked by Corning

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Major school changes involving the Park View, Webster and Adams Schools are under consideration by the Board of Education.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said yesterday that he has proposed that the white Park View Elementary School, Warder and Newton sts. nw., be transferred to use by Negro children.

Under a second proposal, the Webster School, 10th and H sts. nw., now housing an Americanization program for foreign students, would be turned into an office building and the students transferred to the Adams Elementary School, 19th and California sts. nw.

Transfer of the Park View School will save the District the cost of constructing a 20-classroom building for Negroes in the area, Dr. Corning told the school board at a joint meeting of its committees on legislation, finance and buildings and grounds.

A school for Negroes in the area was one of the recommendations of Dr. George D. Strayer in his report to Congress on local school building needs.

Dr. Corning's proposals were contained in a 13-page analysis of the Strayer report. The school head listed major points of agreement and disagreement between the views of school officers and those held by Dr. Strayer.

The Park View School, with a capacity of 780 students, now has an enrollment of 154. The playground adjoining the school is used by Negro children after school hours. It was transferred to a Negro area by the Recreation Board last summer with the understanding that as long as the school remained white the play space would be used by white children during school hours. The Petworth Citizens Association at the time protested the transfer and the joint use of the play space.

Dr. Corning said that more adequate facilities can be provided foreign students at the Adams School than at Webster. Dr. Strayer's report called for rehabilitation of Webster.

Adams, built as a junior high school, currently houses elementary students, special sight-saving and hard-of-hearing classes, and

Supreme Court Upholds Ban On 'Raucous' Sound Trucks

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Sound trucks which send out "loud and raucous noises" can be banned by city ordinances, the Supreme Court said yesterday in upholding a Trenton, N. J., regulation by a 5 to 4 vote.

But the high court broke into one of the widest splits recorded this term when it came to deciding if the Trenton ban means a ban on sound trucks in general, or just "noisy" ones.

And one of the justices who upheld the ban, joined the dissenters in saying that yesterday's decision, when read with a previous decision on the subject, would shed confusion, instead of light, on the rights of sound truck operations.

In another case affecting vehicles, however, the high court was unanimous in upholding the right of New York City to ban from the public streets vehicles which advertise products other than those handled by the vehicles' owners.

This decision involved trucks of the Railway Express Agency. Under a New York ordinance aimed at vehicle advertising which distracts motorists, the firm was convicted for displaying posters advertising cigarettes, a circus, a radio station, the Navy's recruiting program, etc.

The fact that New York nevertheless permits flashing signs with "vivid displays on Times Square,"

Non-Germans Not Compelled To Broadcast, Witness Says

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Adalbert Houben, former German radio official, yesterday denied that any non-Germans were forced to spread Nazi propaganda on the airwaves.

His denial was made during cross examination by James J. Laughlin, attorney for Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, 48, on trial in District Court for treason stemming from broadcasts she allegedly made from Berlin during the war.

Laughlin, who in his opening statement to the jury last week declared that Miss Gillars was "in fear of her life" during many of her programs, asked Houben:

"Were any non-German employes of the Nazi radio system forced to work?"

"No, sir," replied Houben, who had identified himself as "second in command" of the German overseas radio.

"Even if we could have wanted it, we couldn't have forced a person, as a member of the staff to broadcast," he continued.

At another point, however, the Government witness agreed that Miss Gillars had "jeopardized her safety" by broadcasting messages from United States soldiers to their kin just as they were written, without changing the text.

Houben previously had testified changes were ordered in phraseology because of fear on the part of the German high command that

Wheeler to Focus Photographic Mind On Far-Flung Projects of World Bank

Forty years ago at the United States Military Academy, classmates of Cadet Raymond Albert Wheeler nicknamed the tall, gangling youth from Peoria "Speck." For reasons lost in West Point tradition, the term was reserved for those fortunates who could look at a mathematics formula or a fortifications design and remember it ever after.

Through the years since, Lieutenant General Wheeler has used his photographic memory to help lick some of the toughest jobs facing the Army.

To name only a few: He bridged the River Vesle under fire during the Meuse-Argonne offensive in 1918, built the Persian Gulf lend-lease route to Russia, and then was handed one of the worst military headaches of all time—supplying the China-Burma-India theater.

Yesterday, Wheeler's retirement as chief of Army engineers was announced coincident with his appointment to a new post. As chief engineer of the World Bank, he'll advise President John J. McCloy on the technical feasibility of projects all over the globe.

Once again, his exceptional memory, knowledge of the world, and love of work are expected to stand him in good stead.

Friends say the 63-year-old Army officer has no hobbies—except his job. When he returned from southeast Asia in October, 1945—he wound up as CBI Theater Commander—Wheeler took over as chief of engineers without a day's leave. He handled the largest civil works program in history, and was held over when he reached the retirement age last summer.

He'll finish up his Army job February 28—and start to work at the World Bank March 1.

Friends like Maj. Gen. Philip Fleming, Federal Works Agency chief and a West Point classmate, also tell stories of his thoroughness. He has to know all about anything he does. As a shavetail helping build the Panama Canal years ago, he insisted on learning how to operate cranes and dump cars—something few other officers felt necessary.

All this makes "Speck" Wheeler sound slightly unhuman. Nothing could be further from the fact. Civilian and military subordinates down at Gravelly Point describe him as the best of bosses. They talk about his friendliness and warmth.

He makes a habit of walking down the hall to see an aide instead of sending for him. And going out of his way to put a younger officer at ease when three stars suddenly pop into his office. When orders transferring him from duty as maintenance chief of the Panama Canal arrived in Balboa in 1941, the civil employes petitioned the Governor to ask that he be retained.

A year later, when he was appointed a brigadier, veterans of the regiment he commanded in France in 1918 presented Wheeler with his general's stars.

District Building old-timers still remember his fast, skipping walk when he was Assistant Engineer Commissioner of the District in the early '20s. Today his thick hair and bristling mustache are only slightly flecked with gray.

Stories of Wheeler's memory are legion. He once pointed to a reference in a report to a small, little known river in Florida. The long Indian name was misspelled, he said. Aides declared that was the way it was spelled in all of the records and reference books.

"I don't care," said Wheeler. "I was down there 20 years ago and I'm sure."

He was right.

LIEUT. GEN. R. A. WHEELER

Gen. Wheeler To Be Aide to World Bank

Lieut. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler will become engineering adviser to the World Bank after he retires February 28 as Chief of Army Engineers.

John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, announced the appointment at a news conference yesterday. He said Wheeler will start the job March 1.

President Truman yesterday sent to the Senat the nomination of Maj. Gen. Lewis Andrew Pick to be Chief of Engineers, succeeding Wheeler.

The World Bank appointment of General Wheeler ties in with the bank's efforts to give impetus to President Truman's call for a "bold new program" to foster development of the world's backward areas.

The President stressed need of these areas for technical knowledge to make possible attraction of private funds to develop industry in those areas. McCloy earlier had shown considerable interest in the same subject.

Wheeler, a native of Peoria, Ill., is taking a major part in relief operations in snowbound Western States.

McCloy said yesterday Government guarantees can stimulate flow of private capital into international investiments, but that the guarantees also can lead to "diminishing returns."

He told reporters there should be "a great deal of thought and study" on the matter of guarantees. President Truman mentioned such guarantees without elaboration in his speech on the program for backward areas.

McCloy said he is confident there will be a free flow of international private capital eventually without Government guarantees.

Jerusalem May Become Israel Capital

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Occupied Jerusalem soon may be declared the capital of Israel, reliable sources said today. These sources said all government departments may be transfered shortly from Tel Aviv to the Holy City.

Dr. Leo Cohn, author of Israel's draft constitution, is expected to submit an order at the next meetnig Wednesday of the provisional cabinet which will include Jerusalem in the state of Israel.

Until now Jerusalem has been officially regarded as a "military area." In the far future Israel hopes to proclaim Beersheba, in the heart of the Negev, its capital, it has been reported.

King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan legion won Jerusalem's Old City in the early days of Palestine fighting and his troops still occupy that territory. The Israeli army controls the New City. In October, Jews and Arabs worked out a truce under United Nations supervision and Jerusalem has been relatively quiet since.

Reports from Jerusalem said the municipal government there even now is drawing up plans for a permanent parliament building.

Ben-Gurion Outlines Guiding Principles

NYHT News Service

Tel Aviv, Jan. 31.—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion presented a broad outline tonight of the principles which will guide the first elected government of the state of Israel.

In his initial post-election speech Ben-Gurion said the new government must seek an Arab-Israeli alliance, must render loyal support to the United Nations and must direct its foreign policy toward friendship and cooperation with both the United States and Russia.

On the composition of the new cabinet, which he will unquestionably lead, Ben-Gurion indicated a preference for broad party participation but insisted that labor elements must form its majority.

His call for an Arab-Israeli alliance gave fresh emphasis to past assertions that Israel was prepared to play a prominent role in the Middle Eastern bloc. He looked ahead to a period of reconstruction, of large-scale reconstruction, and of "a vast and growing immigration."

"This purpose makes it imperative," he declared, "for every government to encourage the influx from abroad of capital of all kinds, private, state and international, and to harness both private and cooperative enterprises for that speedy and rational development of all this country's latent resources and economic capacities which alone can make possible the constantly increasing absorption of mass immigration."

Egyptians Put On the Spot in Armistice Talk

Rhodes, Jan. 31 (AP).—Israeli-Egyptian armistice talks were said today to have reached a point where the Egyptians have a choice of either making major concessions or taking the responsibility for ending the conference.

The thorny Negev boundary question has deadlocked the negotiations which now are on the verge of failure.

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator, has presented several proposals in an attempt to end the stalemate. One informant described the suggestions as constituting a "Bunche line."

According to this source, the position of the Israeli delegation is close enough to Bunche's proposals to make acceptance probable if the Egyptian agree. The Egyptians were said to have been placed in the position of having to make a decision.

Within an hour and a half after Bunche brought in his documents, Col. Ismail Sherrine of the Egyptian delegation left by plane to present the proposals to authorities in Cairo.

Bunche said meetings would be resumed here when both delegations are ready with "views and reactions," he added: "It is hoped this procedure will serve to crystallize matters."

Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington said yesterday the Nation can have 57 effective combat air groups next year if Congress gives the USAF 800 million dollars budgeted for universal military training.

Such a redistribution of the 1950 defense budget, he told the House Armed Services Committee, would permit the Air Force to order 702 more warplanes than now planned and keep nine more groups in operation than the 48 proposed by President Truman.

Symington did not urge the move, which is backed by Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) and other big airpower Congressmen. He and other USAF chiefs have indorsed Mr. Truman's cutback defense budget, although declaring that the full 70-group air program is essential "when we can afford it."

Testifying on legislation to authorize a 70-group Air Force and a 837,000-man Army, Air Force officials also disclosed plans to bolster the Air Force Reserve next summer.

Brig. Gen. John P. McConnell declared 27 groups will be created in the Reserve under the 1950 budget and provided with 25 per cent of their equipment. The reserve now exists only on paper, he said.

Twenty-six groups now exist in the Air National Guard, he said, and another one will be added. Current plans call for expanding the number of jet fighter groups in the Guard from 5 to 11 by 1952, said McConnell.

Symington was asked by the committee last week to work out how the Air Force would spend the 800 million dollars the President asked for UMT if it were given to them. Yesterday, he said that 435 millions would be spent for aircraft procurement—a total of $1,900,000,000—boosting the number of planes to be ordered from 1668 to 2370.

The remainder of the money would pay of 38,000 additonal officers and men, and provide for maintenance and operation expenses of nine additional groups, for additional research and development work and procurement of more electronics equipment. This would boost the Air Force to a strength of 45,000 by the end of fiscal 1950. An average of 412,000 is provided under the budget.

The Air Force chief said a 57-group setup next year would differ considerably from the 59-group organization now in effect.

Replying to another question asked by committeemen last week, Symington said another billion dollars on top of the 800 millions would be required to establish a 70-group force next year—a total of 6½ billions for the USAF in 1950.

He estimated that if Congress gives them the additional 800 million dollars next year, and steps up funds still further the following year, the Nation can have 70 modern groups by the end of 1954—a year or so later than was planned last year when the Eightieth Congress voted to start the big airpower plan. It appropriated 822 million dollars more than asked by President Truman, as the first increment of a five-year expansion plan.

Simington gave the committee a revised estimate of the way 70 groups would be allocated: Four heavy bomber groups (B-36s); 16 medium bomber groups (B-29s, B-50s and B-54s); six strategic reconnaissance groups (similar types); five light bomber groups (eventually jets); 25 fighter groups (mostly jets); four tactical reconnaissance groups; four heavy troop carrier groups and six medium troop carrier groups.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, told the committee that the Air Force has three "basic tasks" which it must perform "in case of aggression" to "avoid losing the war."

They are: (1) delivery of an "immediate and powerful strategic air offensive against the basic resources of our enemy's warmaking capacity"; (2) defense of the United States and essential bases against air attack; (3) "tactical support of the Army and Navy in exploitation of the opportunity presented through successful prosecution of the first two tasks."

"The success of these operations by the Air Force," Vandenberg added, "will gain for the Nation a situation in which the combined power of all arms could be employed most economically and with the most favorable opportunities for success and a period of time for the wartime mobilization of our resources . . .

"The task of gaining and maintaining air superiority, the winning of the air battle, is a requisite to surface operations."

U. S. Recognition Called 'Sellout of Principles'

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—An associate director of the Methodist Board of Missions said today that "tremendous pressure by a minority group" in support of the Jewish state of Israel "is resulting in a sellout of principles America always has stood for."

Dr. Garland Evans Hopkins of Washington, D. C., told interviewers that "scandalous sums of money are being spent to sell us on Israel."

In Miami to address the Florida chain of missionary assemblies, Dr. Hopkins said that by recognition of the Jewish state "the United States abandons the Wilsonian principle of the right of the majority in foreign affairs."

He said he spent two months in Palestine last year as guest of both the Jewish agency and Arab leaders.

"What everyone fails to see about Palestine," he said, "is that there are two great reawakenings going on there at once.

"There has been a Jewish renaissance, yes, but there has been an Arab one as well. Progress of both peoples has been magnificent, but all you ever hear about is the strides made by the Jews."

Icy Streets Left In Storm's Wake

Below-freezing temperatures turned streets and highways into perilous ice sheets last night in the wake of Washington's 5.7-inch snowfall.

The glassy film that formed on hilly thoroughfares brought grief to many motorists home-bound during the evening rush hours, causing cars to skid into poles, ditches and curbs and snarling traffic at many points.

The weatherman said the snow and rainstorm had passed off to the northeast. He expected the mercury to reach a low of about 26 degrees early today, with some cloudiness forecast for today with a probable high around 40 this afternoon.

Snow-fighting forces said yesterday's sun was the biggest factor in preventing serious trouble. The District sanitation division had 380 men with plows and sand trucks out within two hours after the fall started at 12:20 a. m., and Capital Transit had 25 plows out at 1 a. m.

Nearby Schools Closed

Traffic delays began developing with the start of the morning rush hours around 7 a. m., as automobiles, stalled in drifts, blocked buses and trolley cars. But things were pretty well in hand shortly after the snow stopped at 9:50 a. m., William A. Xanten, District sanitation division chief, said.

Schools were closed in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md. Officials expected to announce by radio this morning that they would reopen today. Some District schools reported absenteeism slightly over normal.

Railroad officials said they were well prepared for the storm and only a few trains were delayed. All commercial flights were canceled during the storm, National Airport reported, but were resumed yesterday afternoon. Interstate bus lines said the storm delayed a few schedules but not seriously.

The American and Keystone Automobile Clubs were swamped with calls for aid from motorists who could not start their cars or were stalled in snow, the AAA alone reporting more than 800 such calls up to late last night. Park police closed several roads in Rock Creek Park, as is customary in such storms, but expected to have them open today.

The mercury rose slowly from the day's low of 23 at 1:36 a. m. to a high of 34 between 4 and 5 p. m., when it began dropping to below freezing during the night.

Normal average temperature for January 31 is 34. High was 71 on that date in 1910, and low was 2 below zero on January 31, 1905.

Yesterday's precipitation brought the total snowfall for the Washington area so far this winter to 11.8 inches. December had a snowfall of 4.4 inches, and 1.7 inches had fallen earlier in January, giving Washington it's mildest and wettest winter—so far—in about 12 years.

In the District's first serious traffic accident, Mrs. Hattie D. Thomason, 21, of the Buzzard's Point boat yard suffered, a possible skull fracture while riding in a car driven by her husband, Harry E. Thomason, 25, a patent examiner in the U. S. Patent Office. Police said Thomason skidded into the center support of the railroad viaduct at South Capitol st. and Virginia ave. when he braked for a sudden stop.

Man Hit by Bus

Owen M. Schroder, 54, of 1224 11th st. nw., suffered a possible ankle fracture when, police said, a bus skidded into him as he left it at 20th and I sts. nw. at 6:15 a. m. Police said the bus was driven by George M. Curtis, 49, of 1120 K st. ne.

In Arlington County, Va., three traffic jams were reported on Lee Highway during the morning traffic peak, the worst caused by automobiles bogging down in snowdrifts at East Falls Church. Virginia buses ran up to half an hour behind schedule and some routes were shut down for a few hours. Two hills on Route 1 below Alexandria, glazed with ice for a time, hampered traffic considerably.

Plow and sanding crews were out early on Prince Georges and Montgomery County roads and reported all State and principal roads cleared shortly after daybreak.

Farther out from Washington main highways were reported open. Cumberland, Md., reported 8½ inches of snow, Frederick 5 inches, Baltimore 3, with 7 inches in the West Virginia panhandle. The Virginia coastal area measured 6 inches, with one inch at Richmond and Quantico, none in Norfolk.

A Greyhound bus overturned on Route 58 near Danville as the driver veered to avoid a car that had cut in front of him and skidded, police said, sending three passengers to Danville Memorial Hospital with minor injuries.

Naval Ordnance Laboratory Seen by Crowd at Dedication

John Nicholas Brown Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, expressed doubt yesterday that boasting of our skill in destroying masses of people is a deterrent to war.

Brown spoke at dedication ceremonies of the central unit of the new 35 million dollars Naval Ordnance Laboratory, at White Oak, Md. His audience included some of the Nation's outstanding figures in science.

"I have come to doubt that boasting of our skill in destroying masses of people is a deterrent to war," the speaker declared. "On the contrary, I suspect that it may be a means of creating overconfidence at home and doubt of our intentions elsewhere, a mixture likely to create explosive pressures."

Another speaker, Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, urged reforms in war-bred systems of contracts with outside firms for research. He also asked higher ceilings for salaries of Government scientists.

Open House Day in conjunction with the dedication ceremonies attracted several thousand visitors, despite the snow and slush.

Following the dedication, a group of distinguished visitors was taken on a tour of the facilities. Those participating included:

Also: Rear Admiral G. B. Davis, commandant of the Potomac River Naval Command; Vice Admiral George F. Hussey, retired ordnance chief; D. F. Carpenter, chairman, Munitions Board, National Military Establishment; Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, Navy director of atomic defense, and Rear Admiral C. T. Joy, commander of the Naval Proving Grounds, Dahlgren, Va.

East Has Dose Of Winter

record zero. The Lone Star State's citrus, tomato and potato crops were severely damaged. One Texas county reported 15 million dollars vegetable damage alone.

In Brownsville, the southermost Texas city, residents shivered in disbelief as the mercury dropped to 25 above.

Other Southern temperatures included: New Orleans, 29; Mobile, 33; Shreveport, La., 8, and Memphis, 17, with 5 inches of snow on the ground.

Atlanta was virtually paralyzed by freezing rain which knocked out city power for almost three hours, stopped electric buses in their tracks, snapped telephone lines and stalled elevators between floors.

The 11-State area including Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Michigan, North Carolina and New York was blanketed with from 4 to 14 inches of snow.

The storm, which struck Washington Sunday night and Monday morning, careened north-northeast yesterday, leaving snow, sleet and freezing rain in its wake. Over southern New Jersey yesterday afternoon, the storm was headed out of the United States through New England early today. New England ski areas, snowless for expensive weeks, would have a bellyful tonight.

Effects of the cold weather in Texas were felt as far north as Chicago, where a record onion futures trade was recorded on the Mercantile Exchange yesterday. Advances ranged from 27 to 34 cents a 50-pound sack of onions, which are grown in the Texas areas most severely hit by the storm.

According to the Associated Press, the death toll in recent days from floods and cold in the South stood at 17, and multi-million-dollar damage had been done southern crops.

In Kentucky nine lives had been lost, four in accidents and five in fires believed to have been caused by overheated furnaces.

Moderate to severe flooding already occurred from the western Gulf States northeastward through the tributaries of the middle Mississippi and the lower Ohio Rivers, the Weather Bureau reported yesterday. This flooding was aggravated by the snow and rain of the last 24 hours in that area.

Overflow was described as "severe" in southern Indiana and in the Trinity River in Texas. There is an extensive ice gorge in the Missouri River north of Kansas City, where the river is at its highest January peak in history.

Damage High in South

Southern crop damage was estimated at millions of dollars. More than 12 million grapefruit and orange trees have been coated with ice. Growers feared a sudden thaw more than a gradual one. Lesser crops of peppers, onions, squash, eggplant, broccoli, spinach and cauliflower were being virtually written off in Texas. Growers are pessimistic about 16,000 acres of common spuds.

Over the entire national picture stood the specter of mass starvation for millions of range animals roaming the Western plains.

The United Press estimated 119,000 cattle and 134,000 sheep, valued at $19,600,000, have already been killed, either by freezing or starvation. Another 5½ million livestock are still endangered. Their total value approximates half a billion dollars. American housewives would feel their loss in sky-high summer meat prices.

Railroad damage from the storm has been estimated at 50 million dollars, property damage at $10,700,000, and wages lost at another million dollars.

Authorities agreed the situation in Nebraska, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming South Dakota and Arizona, all in a state of emergency, remained most critical.

Midland blizzard relief was proceeding as fast as possible, the Army said yesterday, with the weather an unknown quantity.

The box score showed 265 bulldozers, 58 weasels, and 2 graders had been placed in the Nebraska-South Dakota service by military sources. And the Nebraska National Guard had sent 308 bulldozers into the area before the Army took over.

The prime effort was to open up roads so supplies could move by truck.

Truman Asks $500,000 More for Storm Relief

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for an additional $500,000 to fight the blizzard.

In a letter to the House, the President said $500,000 has already been spent for disaster relief.

Representative Granger (D., Utah) informed the President, however, that at least five million dollars more is needed to meet the crisis. "No one knows when this thing is going to let up," he said. "Perhaps the worst is yet to come."

He did not comment on the President's reaction to his request, but did say the President "appreciates the situation" and "doesn't see any sense in doing only half the job."

50 Students, 8 Teachers Felled By Gas In School

McAllen, Tex., Jan. 31 (AP).—An estimated 50 pupils and eight teachers were treated tonight after they had been overcome by gas or gas fumes at a McAllen public school this morning.

Most of them became violently ill when they staggered out of the classrooms at Lincoln Elementary School. An emergency clinic was set up in the school gymnasium.

Tonight the emergency clinic was moved to the fire station and indications were that there may be more coming back for a second oxygen treatment and others may be feeling the effects for the first time.

A city gas system representative said condensation in the gas pipes, because of the cold, may have resulted in incomplete combustion, causing fumes.

Starving Range Cattle Rush Blindly Toward Smell of Hay

Rapid City, S. Dak., Jan. 31 (AP).—Watching cattle fed for the first time in nearly a month is like witnessing the barriers of habit melt away to expose a raw, terrifying and the most basic of all instincts—self-preservation.

The smell of hay being brought to them by truckers—through alleys in the prairie snow drifts as far as a mile—will make weakened cattle rise to their feet and charge blindly in the direction of the feed.

Small calves and yearlings plow through barbed wire, tearing off huge clumps of hair, or drive into crusted snowbanks, sometimes to flounder as the hay is brought to them.

Stark Drama Every Day

This is the stark drama taking place every day as the huge State and Federal relief program fans out across the mountains and prairies.

The airlift, "Operation Hay," while a valiant and necessary measure in the emergency, soon found itself bogged down as stockpiles of feed dwindled.

Dozer crews are working around the clock.

When a truck loaded with hay enters the pasture to unload feed for the first time on a barren, windswept knoll, you feel a tug somewhere around the pit of your stomach as the animals stampede to the pile, jamming into feed, stamping into it. Their deep-pitched bellows carry an almost hungry echo.

Calves Suffered Most

The calves suffered most from the extended sub-zero cold. A close look reveals frozen patches on their hides, hoofs near the leg bone showing wide separations. Bloating is a common sight.

Out on the perimeter of the herds where others have lain for a long time, too weak from starvation to move about, you can see them struggling to rise. But sooner or later they all seem to make it, to struggle somehow over to the precious hay.

Atlanta Hit Hard by Snow, Sleet Storm

Atlanta, Jan. 31 (AP).—Winter dealt a knockout blow to this metropolis of nearly half a million today and laid a hard freeze over most of the rest of Dixie on top of sleet and snow.

Power failures that began just before the morning rush hour tied Atlanta in knots. There wasn't a kilowatt of current in the city during the forenoon, except for a few auxiliary sources. Four major operations underway at Grady hospital when the power failed were completed by flashlight. One baby was born during the blackout.

Power lines crashed down under their weight of ice faster than linemen could string new ones. Elevators stalled and trolley buses lost their juice en route to town, stranding thousands of workers.

Hugh W. Lester, 61-year-old life insurance company cashier, walked the 15 floors to his office and died of a heart attack when he reached it.

Emergency transmission lines were rigged and current surged back to the downtown area about noon. The residential areas had their power restored during the afternoon but outlying areas still faced a dark night.

The North Georgia towns of Gainsville and Athens were also reported without power. Gainesville also faced a water shortage because of lack of power for pumping, and consequent fire hazards.

Norway Seen Defying Red Pact Protest

Oslo, Norway, Jan. 31 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Halvard Lange began work today on Norway's answer to the Soviet note on the Atlantic pact, but there was no sign this country will drop its determniation to join in an overseas alliance with the United States.

Russia reportedly asked the government to set forth its views on the projected Atlantic alliance, linking western Europe and North America.

The note came up for discussion in the final session of Scandinavian prime ministers, defense and foreign ministers, but the conference ended as it began—Norway and Denmark leaning to the west, Sweden determined to remain neutral.

Apparently ready to defy Russia, Langes said the Soviet message will be answered "in the usual way." Parliament will be consulted on the Atlantic pact and Norway will take the initiative in the western nations, he said.

NYHT News Service

London, Jan. 31.—The British Foreign Office indicated tonight it would inform the United States of Great Britain's strong objections to any plan for exclusive Soviet-American talks on the problems of Europe.

A spokesman indicated there would be early consultations between Britain, the United States and France in an effort to avoid any break in their solid diplomatic front against the Soviet Union.

British officials linked Premier Stalin's statements of Sunday with recent peace overtures of European Communists, such as Palmiro Togliatti in Italy, Marcel Cachin in France and General Markos in Greece.

One commented: "It is designed to prey on the fears of well-disposed but weak men who want peace at any price—suckers anywhere."

Western Diplomats Skeptical of Stalin

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—Western diplomats took a skeptical view tonight of Prime Minister Stalin's cagy "peace" overture. Many quarters thought Stalin was reflecting Russia's shock at the speed with which movements for western unity are taking shape.

Experts in capitals all over the world were studying the answers Stalin gave yesterday to an American newsman's questions. They were trying to determine whether Stalin was engaged in a Soviet propaganda move or was expressing a genuine desire for peace.

A Moscow dispatch said Stalin's statements had convinced many Russians that their leader is going to sit down at a conference table with Mr. Truman. Foreign diplomats in the Soviet capital were doubtful, however.

Soviet Press Says Reaction Is Favorable

NYHT News Service

Moscow, Jan. 31.—Reports published in the Soviet press today said there was a favorable reaction abroad to the statement issued yesterday by Prime Minister Stalin and that by it he revived hope of world peace and identified himself with talk of peace, leaving it up to President Truman to decide what to do next.

In the opinion of the American Embassy at Moscow, the Stalin statement did not offer any concrete suggestion for solving the basic differences among the Big Four powers.

According to radio reports heard here, Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Warren R. Austin, American delegate to the United Nations, said they were favorably impressed.

Truman Waits For Action

the "democratic fontier" held by Greece and Turkey.

Out of this grew the Marshall Plan, aimed at bolstering countries in Western Europe being undermined by the Communists.

Now American foreign policy is to be capped by a North Atlantic security pact. This would tie together the military strength of the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and also—if they could shed their fear of Russia—the Scandinavian countries.

President Truman is determined to go ahead with plans for this North Atlantic pact, regardless of "peace" gestures from Moscow.

There was a suspicion here that Premier Stalin was more than eager to say that he would be willing to consider an American-Soviet no-war declaration.

It was expected that the Communist propagandists would use this in an effort to work up sentiment in the United States and other countries against the North Atlantic pact.

"Peace Drive" Launched

Last spring, following what was supposed to be a confidential exchange between Washington and Moscow, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov launched what was called a "peace drive." Henry Wallace joined in and called for a Big Two understanding. Critics of the Administration on Capitol Hill accused Mr. Truman and General Marshall of "slamming the door" on Russia.

The President, answering all this later in a June speech at the University of California, said:

"Anyone can talk of peace. But only the work that is done for peace really counts . . .

"The cleavage that exists is not between the Soviet Union. It is between the Soviet Union and the rest of the world . . .

Honest Overtures Welcome

"The door is always open for honest negotiations looking toward genuine settlements. The door is not open, however for deals between great powers to the detriment of other nations or at the expense of principle.

"We refuse to play fast and loose with man's hope for peace. That hope is too sacred to be trifled with for propaganda purposes, or selfish advantage, by any individual or nation. We are interested in peace—not in propaganda."

Super A-Bomb In Production

termed it "security through public information." Among releases now under way are: "Nuclear Reactors for Aircraft," due about March 1; developments in use of nuclear reactors at power plants, about March 15; disposal of radioactive waste, about April 1; a source book on atomic energy and an atomic weapons handbook. The latter, he said is a "long way from complete"—probably will be ready June 15.

After stating that new and more powerful bombs had been developed, the commission declared that "further developments are in progress. Lilienthal said these new developments meant "still newer models." The present superweapons are those tested at Eniwetok with some minor refinements. These tests, he said, showed that "a substantial gain in energy releases was obtained as compared with those dropped on Japan and Bikini."

Although more powerful, it was indicated that the newer bombs may even be smaller than the earlier ones. The report also indicated that all bombs are still in possession of the AEC—none in the hands of the military—but that "the commission has been cooperating fully with the military establishment in taking measures to assure a maximum state of readiness in the field of atomic weapons."

It then stated that "since 1946 the AEC and its contractors have effected improvements and efficiency that have resuled in increased production on fissionable materials at lowered cost.

"With better facilities and process, the production system turned out more fissionable materials during 1948 than in 1947. In spite of higher wages and greater costs of materials, the average cost of the product is less per pound today than it was a year ago. The yield of product from each ton of raw material continued to increase because of a reduction of the amount of uranium lost in factory wastes."

Raw uranium ore is required to obtain the explosive fraction—uranium 235—and also the explosive plutonium made from non-explosive uranium.

Measure of Wealth

"The amount of these materials available is a significant measure of the national wealth," the report said. "It determines how many atomic weapons the American people can build for defense, and the number and power of atomic machines—nuclar reactors—that can be operated for application of the new energy to all parts of our national life."

The report, divided into sections, also touched upon peacetime benefits of nuclear research. Besides making bombs, AEC has furnished radioactive isotopes as "tracers" which scientists are using to learn how green leaves of plants turn carbon dioxide and water into food.

4 China Provinces Plan Finish Fight

Canton, China, Jan. 31 (AP).—China's four southern provinces centered on Canton will make a last-ditch stand against the Communists, whatever the outcome of peace efforts elsewhere, Gov. Hsueh Yueh declared today.

The new governor of Kwangtung, who reluctantly took over last week after T. V. Soong departed, said he was "ready to be a martyr" and intended to lead the independent defense of Kwangtung, Kwangsi, Hunan and Fukien Provinces.

He predicted Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek would try a comeback from his questionable 10-day-old retirement, but intimated Chiang would get a cool welcome in the south.

As he spoke, the Communists formally took over the old northern capital of Peiping and government hopes of arranging a general surrender deal seemed fainter than ever.

Acting President Li Tsung-jen flew from Nanking to Shanghai but returned to the semideserted capital after a short stay.

A reliable official source said Li's trip was "in pursuit of efforts toward peace," but his quick return hinted at failure.

The government is in process of moving from Nanking to Canton, and has announced it will be functioning in Canton by Saturday.

Hsueh, however, said no final decision had been made and the government "probably will go to Formosa."

He said Premier Sun Fo, last reported in Shanghai, "wants to come to Canton to join us," and added, "Li Tsung-jen would also like to come, but there is no need."

Hsueh, famous as the defender of Changsha against the Japanese, was appointed governor of Kwangtung by Li on January 21, the same day Chiang retired and Soong resigned.

He said he already had mapped a four-province defense coalition. Asked directly if his action meant a split with the Nanking regime, he replied:

"We are fighting both feudalism and communism. Nanking has failed because they were feudalistic. I include Chiang Kai-shek among the feudalists."

Hsueh acknowledged he had been reluctant to accept the governorship from Nanking because he considered Nanking politically backward.

"I am a progressive," he stated. "As governor of this province I intend to initiate political and economic reforms heretofore neglected by the Nationalists."

He said no Nationalist troops in the north were included in his defense plans.

Hsueh said he expected support of most of the generals who fought for him against the Japanese and of "all truly revolutionary generals and Yen Hsi-shan, now holding out in besieged Taiyuan." (Yen, in the distant north and entirely surrounded by Communists, is not likely to be of much help.)

The governor admitted at present his forces are outnumbered in Kwangtung Province alone by some 60,000 armed dissidents of various hues. He emphasized, however, his fight was a joint four-province effort, not a lone stand.

(Surrender of Peiping by Gen. Fu Tso-yi, Nationalist commander, was arranged January 22, but the Communists had kept in the background for the following nine days.

(The Communist radio said Fu had been arrested as a "war criminal" but after his acceptance of the Peiping settlement "he may hope to obtain the understanding of the people and be permitted to atone for his crimes."

Border Battle Reported by South Korea

Seoul, Korea, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—South Korean defenders are fighting a North Korean "invasion" force in a "severe battle" along the zonal border and a revolt has broken out in the South Korean Sixth Army division, a government spokesman reported today.

Spokesman Choi Chi Wan said 400 members of the Communist-dominated North Korean people's army crossed the thirty-eighth parallel and raided Chungdan, a town 2½ miles south of the border and 65 miles east of Seoul.

South Korean forces recaptured Changkol village, near Chungdan, which the North Koreans held for a day, Choi said. He reported that 3000 North Korean troops were concentrated near the border at Chunkok, 40 miles north of this capital.

Sixty soldiers of the South Korean Sixth division revolted at Pohang, 160 miles southeast of Seoul, and killed one officer and six enlisted men who refused to take part, the spokesman said.

They marched to the eastern port of Kuryunto, where they were attacked by 240 police and 80 loyal soldiers. The rebels used American rifles and ammunition, Chai said.

15,000 Utility Workers Strike in Brussels

Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Fifteen thousand gas and electric workers began a nationwide strike for higher wages today.

Members of the Catholic Gas and Electricity Workers Union did not join the walkout, pending company negotiations with the government for a price increase. The company says it cannot raise wages without raising rates.

Surrender of Karen Army To Burmese Troops Reported

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 31 (AP).—Government sources said a force of entrenched Karen rebels surrendered today after a bitter nine-hour battle with Burmese troops on the outskirts of Rangoon.

Heavy machine guns and mortars blasted the Karens from trenches and concrete buildings in and about the village of Thamaing, only 8 miles north of the capital, the informants said. At times the battle raged at point-blank range.

Residents of the suburbs made a panicky rush toward Rangoon after the shooting stopped.

The fighting held up peace talks scheduled here. Saw Ba U Gyi, president of the separatist Karen National Union, was unable to get through the battle area to resume truce conversations started yesterday with Burmese government leaders.

The Karens seek to carve out of Burma their own independent state of Karenistan. A Communist group also is fighting to set up its own state. Other Communists are fighting to overturn the government and seize power. Just who is cooperating with whom in the rebellions is a changing and often confusing question. Britain granted Burma independence a year ago. Internal disorders have swept through Burma since shortly after the end of World War II.

Another major fight between the Karens and Burmese national forces was brewing in the Irrawaddy delta area, southwest of Rangoon. Armed Karens were massing on the river bank opposite the town of Maubin, presumably planning an effort to seize it, a government communique said. They were repulsed in an attack on a village flanking Maubin, the government said.

How a Plow Kept the Village Fed

. . . with a hand from an "Unseen Friend"

It was a real, old-fashioned blizzard.

Gone were the highways. Cars were snowed under like igloos. Food trucks were stalled on the highways. Even young Garry Weaver found it "tough sledding" to the village store.

Then, far down at the turn of the road, a geyser of white shoots in the air. It's the county's giant new "snow eater"... gobbling in the snow... and blowing it out again ... over onto the empty fields.

And close behind... on the magic carpet of road unrolling from the "plow"... come the trucks... carrying food... milk... mail.

As one of the local officials said a few days later... "That snow plow sure was a friend in need."

And Nickel is the "Unseen Friend" that helped keep the plow on the job. For Nickel alloys plus good design make gears and shafts and other important parts extra strong ... tough... corrosion-resistant.

This assures husky construction, yet keeps over-all weight down. It means you can count on this equipment to plow through the deepest drifts, and not to break down in emergencies.

Of course, you don't actually see the Nickel because it's combined with other metals... just as there is unseen Nickel in Monel water heater tanks, Stainless Steel trains, and scores of other things that serve folks every day.

That's why Nickel is called "Your Unseen Friend."

Non-Germans Not Forced to Broadcast, Former Nazi Radio Official Tells 'Axis Sally' Jury

the original messages might contain information in code.

"Isn't it a fact," Laughlin demanded, "that Miss Gillars broadcast the messages just as written and jeopardized her safety?"

"Yes, sir," Houben said.

However, on later questioning it was brought out that changes in the text were the province of Houben himself before handing down the messages to Miss Gillars for broadcast.

During the morning session the jury read another record in a series of 27 transcribed at a Government monitoring station in Silver Hill, Md., from intercepted Berlin programs beamed to this country.

Hear Invasion Drama

Donning earphones, the jury, Federal Judge Edward M. Curran, and other interested parties to the case heard a drama entited "Vision of Invasion" which vortrayed an anguished American mother receiving a psychic presentment of the death of her son aboard a torpedoed invasion vessel. According to Houben, the part of the mother was played by Miss Gillars.

The drama, though well written and well enacted, struck a ludicrous note when the voices of supposedly American soldiers came through the earphones with thick, gutteral German accents.

The play opened with sound of a steamship whistle and the drone of planes.

After a man's voice exclaims "D-Day!" other voices explain the "D" stands for doom, defeat, disaster, death, Dunkirk or Dieppe.

There follows, in supposed conversation among two men, a horrific description of the carnage wrought to vessels and the men aboard during the Dieppe raid. The dead "looked like dressed meat in a butcher shop," one of the characters said.

All From United States

Then, a bit of dialogue between the "captain" of an invasion boat and a bystander:

Man: "Say, Captain, where is all this oil coming from?

Captain: "From the United States."

Man: "And the tanks?"

Captain: "From the United States."

Man: "And the guns?"

Captain: "From the United States."

Man: "And the canned food?"

Captain: "From the United States."

Man: "And the boys?"

Captain: "From the United States."

Man: "The U. S. is running the whole invasion . . . financially, I mean?"

Captain: "Also with blood."

(After more similar dialogue, the scene shifts to the hold of an invasion vessel.)

Yank: ". . . ship like sardines in a can."

Second Yank: "Yah—it seems like riding a downtown subway in the rush hour, eh?"

First Yank—"Yah—I wouldn't mind riding in a subway now.

Third Yank— . . . "if we get hit by a bomb or something, eh?"

First Yank—But don't forget we are living in the century of progress.

Third Yank—"Yah, yah, the higher standard of living." (There follows dialogue between a doughboy named "Allan" and his buddy "Bob" in which the former says: "Y'know, Bob, I have a feeling I'll never see the States again," and the latter answers: "Well, you always wanted to see Europe, didn't you?")

The scene moves to the home of "Allan's" parents, "Elmer" and "Evelyn," who have been listening to the radio giving news of the landing in Europe. After telling her husband to "shut that damn thing off," Evelyn says:

"Oh! Elmer, can't you understand that it gets on my nerves?"

Elmer: "War nerves . . . try to keep without nerves, Evelyn—just a waste of energy and in a way sabotage of our war effort in the United States."

Evelyn: "Oh, you're talking like a cheap advertisement in a newspaper. I hate this kind of talk."

"But everybody says the invasion is suicide. The simplest person knows that. Between 70 and 90 per cent of our boys will be killed or crippled the rest of their lives.

Elmer: "What can we do about it?"

Evelyn: "Bah! We could have done a lot about it. Have we got a government of the people or not? Roosevelt had no right to go to war."

Later, Evelyn asks: " . . . and what about Roosevelt's sons? One of them is down in Miami now sunning himself and when a reporter asked him 'How can you afford vacationing in Miami in these times?' do you know what he answered?"

Elmer: "What?"

Evelyn: "'Because my old man's got a lot of money.'"

After some further discussion about "slaughter" of young men, "Evelyn" gets hallucinations that she keeps hearing steamboat whistles and, at the suggestion of her husband, goes upstairs to sleep it off.

The action swings back to the invasion ship, which is torpedoed and Allan is drowned. Evelyn wakes from sleep with a piercing moan.

Allan's voice: "Mother . . . mother!"

Evelyn: "Allan!"

Allan: "Oh, Mother!"

Evelyn: "Oh! It's so—so dark!"

Allan: "The blackout all over the world."

Allan: "Not yet, Mother."

Evelyn: 'But that whistle."

Allan: "No whistle, it's the steam in our boiler room . . . the boiler room was hit, and our ship . . . we are sunk!" Evelyn screams.

Tolling Deathknell

The play winds up with a woman's voice intoning: "The dead bells of Europe's bombed cathedrals are tolling the deathknell of America's youth!"

Houben testified that he "believed" he congratulated Miss Gillars on her performance as "Evelyn." He said he also congratulated Dr. Otto Koischwitz, naturalized American and former Hunter College professor, now dead, who, it had been testified, wrote the script.

In testimony explaining the devious workings of Nazi propaganda, Houben, who occupied the stand all day, declared Nazi theory was that Roosevelt worked hand in glove with "communist" Jewish conspirators because he numbered Judge Samuel Rosenman and Bernard Baruch among his advisers.

The witness, under cross examination, said he had never seen Miss Gillars broadcast but said he had her programs on the air a number of times.

"You knew the Gestapo tracked her down, didn't you?" Laughlin demanded.

Means of Livelihood?

After Homben testified he had appeared as a witness against Douglas Chandler and Robert Best, two former United States newsmen recently given life sentences for treason, Laughlin inquired.

"You make your living by testifying against people, don't you, Mr. Houben?"

The short, stocky Nazi radio official, usually cool, reddened and snapped: "What do you mean by that?"

Laughlin repeated the question and Houben, regaining composure, replied calmly in the negative.

Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., told reporters that today he expects to call as witnesses two persons who appeared in the "invasion" radio drama. He said he would also call Capt. Harvey Crosthwaite, Canadian officer, once interviewed by Miss Gillars, and Karl Schotte, former German radio official who had been sent to a concentration camp for failing to censor properly certain broadcasts.

The trial will resume at 10 a. m. today.

D. C. Man Faces Gaming Charge In Prince Georges

A District resident has been charged by Prince Georges County police with permitting gambling at a restaurant in Colmar Manor, Md.

He is Joseph Brenner, 31, of 1211 Simms pl. ne., a member of the corporation, police said, which owns The Wheel restaurant on Bladensburg rd. in Colmar Manor.

According to Detective Wilson J. Purdy, Brenner was arrested Sunday night after Purdy and Pvt. Donald Forscht, both in plainclothes, played two slot machines in the restaurant. The machines "paid off." Brenner was released in $500 bond for hearing Friday at Upper Marlboro police court.

The case of Julius Richards, 58, and Arthur J. Andrews, 48, charged with operating a slot machine at the Palo Alto Tavern, Bladensburg, was continued yesterday in Hyattsville police court until February 18.

Controls Extension Voted by Senate

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate by a voice vote yesterday agreed to continue for seven months a Republican-initiated program to allocate such scarce materials as steel by voluntary industry agreements.

The vote came after Administration forces had beaten back, 48 to 31, a Republican proposal to extend the voluntary controls for 13 months.

The Truman Administration had asked for a seven-months extension pending action on its own measure to give the President power to compel allocations of scarce materials for essential uses.

House Action Slated

The extension measure now goes to the House, where it is slated for floor consideration Wednesday.

During debate on the measure Senate Republicans pointed out over and over again that the first action of the Administration to control inflation was to extend a Republican law.

The longer extension to 13 months was proposed by Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio) in an obvious effort to block later consideration of mandatory controls.

The vote defeating Bricker's motion followed party lines. Two Republicans, Senators William Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) joined with the 46 Democrats to oppose the amendment.

Expert Control Hearing

Congress was told, meanwhile, that by continuing export controls it can guard against the shipment abroad of materials that some day could be used in war against America.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said that with such controls "I hope we shall not see repeated" such things as the prewar shipment of scrap iron to Japan.

Blaisdell asked the House Banking Committee for a 28-month extension of export controls beyond the February 28 expiration date.

"Generally speaking, they are to protect the domestic economy by limiting exports of scarce materials, to channel exports to countries where need is greatest and where our foreign policy and national security interests would be best served," he said.

Miles W. Vaughn, Asia UP Chief, Drowns at Tokyo

Tokyo, Japan, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Miles W. Vaughn, 57, United Press vice president and general manager for Asia, was drowned yesterday when his sampan was capsized by a squall while he was hunting ducks in Tokyo Bay. Lost with him was Maj. T. R. Haddock, U. S. Army dental officer, of Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The bodies, identified today, were spotted in the water by an Army helicopter pilot.

Vaughn was an expert on the Far East. He had interviewed practically all the leading figures in China and Japan and had held important United Press posts in Brazil, Argentina, India, Peru, New York and other cities of the United States.

ERP Breaches Barriers of Nationalism, Hoffman Says

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman said last night the Marshall Plan has encouraged western Europe to surmont the ancient barriers of nationalism.

"For the first time in history," he said, "a body of men are beginning to think and plan and build together as Europeans and not as nationals of separate states."

Hoffman addressed a dinner meeting of the National Planning Association at the Statler Hotel. Gold medals were awarded to Hoffman and Gen. George C. Marshall for their contributions to the European recovery program.

Marshall, former Secretary of State, who is recovering from an operation, was unable to attend. He sent a message stating the European Recovery Program "provides the most convincing kind of demonstration of what cooperation . . . can accomplish for the benefit of all."

Hoffman said the Marshall Plan was "one of the few ideas which, in each age, fundamentally alter the direction of history."

Deploring the extent to which European countries had become isolated in recent decades, Hoffman said:

"Sir Stafford Cripps remarked to me last summer that more progress had been made in a single year toward breaking down nationalism in Europe than had been made in the previous 500 years."

The very survival of democratic western Europe, he said, depends on continuing and improving this new cooperative spirit.

"Freedom cannot survive today, challenged as it is by communism, unless the democracies of the world can furnish their citizens, in addition to freedom, an opportunity to attain decent material conditions of life."

Hoffman characterized planning in the Soviet Union as aimed at "enslavement." He said "our kind of planning is . . . . planning for freedom."

General Marshall's award was accepted by Wayne Chatfield Taylor, adviser on financial and monetary policy of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

An NPA certificate award also was given to Robert Heller of Cleveland, a member of NPA's board of trustees, for a report on governmental reorganization.

The association's committees and trustees earlier yesterday heard brief talks by Senator Joseph P. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin.

Geoffrey Crowther, editor of the London Economist, will address a luncheon meeting today. President Truman is scheduled to address a dinner meeting at 8 tonight in the Congressional Room of the Statler.

Book on Oppression In Soviet Indorsed

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—A French deputy who once was decorated by Russia testified in court today that "the people in Soviet Russia are as oppressed as the people who were occupied by the Nazis."

Several exiled Russians also gave grim descriptions of life in the Soviet Union.

Their testimony was given in the trial of Victor A. Kravchenko's $3000 libel suit against the pro-Communist French weekly newspaper Les Lettres Francaises.

Kravchenko seeks damages for criticisms the paper published of him and his book, "I Choose Freedom," an account of life behind the iron curtain.

The French deputy, Andre Moynet, had served in Russia during World War II, flying with the Red Air Force. He testified that in his opinion Kravchenko's book did not exaggerate. "I wonder if it wasn't" possible for him to have been even more severe" in describing conditions in Russia, Moynet said.

Moynet holds the award, "Hero of the Soviet Union."

Gabriel Kysilo, a former Russian engineer, testified that Kravchenko's reports of spying and police brutality in Russia is accurate. Kysilo said he was tortured and beaten until he confessed he was a Trotskyite. He added that he was sentenced to 18 years in a concentration camp, but escaped during the war.

Two Ukrainian witnesses told of mistreatment of peasants accused of being "rich."

Joe Nordman, attorney for Les Lettres Francaises, is trying among other things to prove that Kravchenko is a "United States Government agent." He asked why Kravchenko uses assumed names when traveling. Kravchenko retorted: "The name I travel under is my own business. I have 15 aliases and may change again."

Kravchenko said Soviet secret police visited his living quarters in New York and questioned him three days after he resigned from the Russian Purchasing Commission in America.

DEAN RUSK

Truman Nominates Dean Rusk As Assistant Secretary of State

President Truman yesterday nominated Dean Rusk, director of the State Department's Office of United Nations Affairs, for promotion to Assistant Secretary of State.

Rusk succeeds to a vacancy created by the resignation of Norman Armour last summer.

Lives in Alexandria

Rusk lives in Alexandria. He was educated in the public schools of Atlanta and was graduated from Davidson College in North Carolina in 1931.

After three years as a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University, Rusk attended the University of Berlin in 1934 and later studied at the University of California law school.

Prior to the war he was associate professor of government and dean of the faculty at Mills College, Oakland, Calif.

During the war he was deputy chief of staff in the China-Burma-India theater and lated served in the Operations Planning Division of the War Department General Staff.

Goes to State Department

In 1946, he was appointed assistant chief of the division of international security in the State Department. Later that same year he became assistant to the secretary of war.

President Truman also nominated Jesse M. Donaldson for a new term as Postmaster General.

The nomination of Donaldson, the only member of the President's cabinet who serves a fixed term, had been expected. He rose from the ranks to head the Post Office Department.

Georgian Pays Tribute To Chairman Dawson

Representative Carl Vinson, Democrat dean of the Georgia delegation in the House, paid a high tribute to a Georgia-born colleague, Representative William L. Dawson, (D., Ill.) yesterday.

Appearing before the House Executive Expenditures Committee headed by Dawson, the first Negro chairman of an important committee, Vinson told Dawson:

"All Georgia is proud of you and the record you have made."

Dawson said that he was proud that "in my secret thinking I still call Georgia my State."

Committee Hears Hoover

"by direction and authority of the Armed Services—all 33 members." He declared they "want their day in court, to debate any reorganization of the armed services on its own merits."

He declared that Congress has the "constitutional responsibility to maintain the national defense." He shouted that the "paramount duty of Government is the preservation of it." He pledged support to the reorganization plan if his amendment was adopted, and indicated that the other members of his committee would go along with it also. He declared, in the course of close questioning, that his committee would forego committee study of any reorganization bill affecting the armed services—and leave such a bill solely to the Expenditures Committee—if his amendment was included.

Vinson declared that there was "a serious effort in this committee before to take the Marine Corps from the Navy and give it to the Army." When three or four committee members jumped him on that statement, he changed it to "a serious effort before the committee."

When asked by Representative Rich if he didn't "trust the President" in making a proper type of reogranization, the Georgian replied "I want to do my things myself."

Vinson feared, he said, efforts would be made to transfer the civil duties of the Corps of Engineers to Commerce or Interior, or to merge the Marine Corps and the Army and the Navy air arm and the Air Force. He said if such changes were included in a measure with "very desirable" reorganizations in other departments, it would be difficult to defeat them. "Don't fence us in," he shouted.

Vinson's testimony came in a suddenly called afternoon session of the Expenditures group. Hoover had testified all morning, and at the close of his appearance, Chairman Dawson announced that that would close all hearings on the bill. Later Vinson asked to be heard, and the new session was called.

Hoover declared that if the bars were let down by exempting certain groups the pressure to have other agencies exempted would be nearly overwhelming.

That such pressure beside Vinson's already has been applied, was indicated several times during the testimony. Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) declared that "more pressure than any place" was from the Army Engineers in opposition to transferring their civil functions. Hoover declared that there was no reason why certain functions in the construction field couldn't be so transferred.

After all, he said, there are "only about 185 Army Engineers" in the corps. In addition, he pointed out, there are "about 1500 civil engineers and about 15,000 employes." He said he had proposed such a change when he was President in 1931, but it never got any place. He said some transfer of responsibilities from Army Engineers to Interior or Department of Public Works had been recommended by task forces of the Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch, set up by Congress, which he heads.

Hoover said some changes in the Defense Establishment, involving civilian employes, accounting, "supplies procurement and general housekeeping" had been recommended. When committee members remarked that pressure also had been applied to prevent changes in the Railroad Retirement Board he said no recommendation had been made to combine it with other agencies.

"It might be made a part of some department—answerable to the head of the department instead of to the President," he remarked.

Mr. Hoover said the Government agencies now number more than 1800 compared with only 350 20 years ago. "There are over 30 agencies engaged in lending money," he said, "making guarantees or insurance activities.

"There are 23 agencies engaged in major construction activities competing with each other for labor and materials and scattered over 11 departments or agencies.

"There are 12 agencies dealing with major transportation questions, not including regulatory functions, scattered through eight departments and independent agencies."

He presented a list showing 65 agencies reporting "direct to the President." Still another list showed 94 and a third list 101.

He said his recommendations would not touch the "quasi-legislative" or "quasi-judicial" duties of many agencies, such as Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Reserve Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, etc. But, he said, it was studying taking away administrative functions from them. He pointed out that there are such "quasi-legislative and judicial" powers in many agencies now a part of departments.

He urged that the powers be vested in the President, because "it is hopeless to expect Congress to investigate and legislate out the vast detail" of duplications and conflicts among agencies.

Park View School Transfer Asked

offices of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Dr. Corning also proposed that the Oyster Elementary School, 29th and Calvert sts. nw., which Dr. Strayer recomended be closed, be used instead for offices and special classes transferred from the Adams, as well as for elementary students.

The school superintendent told board members that he disagreed with Dr. Strayer's proposal that plans for replacing the Negro Cardozo High School be abandoned.

Says New Cardozo Needed

A new Cardozo is needed, he said, to provide "adequate and conveniently located senior high school accommodations for the increasingly heavy Negro population west of Soldiers Home and north of Massachusetts ave.

Dr. Corning said that failure to build a new school "will wipe out the existence of the only high school in the dual systems of this country with a program devoted exclusively to business education for colored youth."

Dr. Corning said he opposed closing down of the Negro Reno and Military Road Elementary Schools as proposed by the Strayer report.

Although the schools are operated far below capacity, their closing would make it necessary for the children to travel long distances to go to school.

Reno, with a capacity of 120 students, now has an enrollment of 3. Military Road, built for 120 students, has 25.

Would Defer Action

The school head said that action on four proposals recommended by Dr. Strayer should be deferred at present pending studies of population trends. They are additions to Kenilworth, Noyes and Ketcham Schools and a new school in the Shipley Terrace area.

He urged that four projects already approved by the board but not in the Strayer report be included in any large scale building program. They are an addition to the Keene School, replacements for the Bruce and Merritt, and a new school at Pomeroy and Stanton rds. se.

Dr. Corning said that school officials have changed their minds about five elementary schools scheduled for replacement. Instead they should be reconditioned as Dr. Strayer recommends, he said. The schools are the white Edmonds, Maury, Peabody and Hyde Schools and the Negro Bell School.

Three proposals made by Dr. Strayer on schoolhouse capacity and planning are "so far-reaching" they need further study, Dr. Corning said. These proposals would increase the size of the elementary classroom from 700 to 900 square feet, cut the elementary class from 36 to 30 pupils, and provide additional space in junior and senior high schools.

Asks Additional Time

Dr. Corning also asked for additional time to prepare a report on the Strayer recommendation that a thirteenth and fourteenth grade be added to the school system.

While school officers agree that a central administration building is needed to house all offices now scattered in six buildings, Dr. Corning said that he did not think the Central High School building should be used for this purpose.

He said he preferred to follow Dr. Strayer's suggestion that Central continue in use as a combined junior and senior high school until some decision is reached on adding a thirteenth and fourteenth grade.

The two new grades would be housed in the Central building.

Dr. Corning listed the following projects in which he said school officials agree with the Strayer recommendations:

White Elementary Schools
Amidon-Fairbrother and Greenleaf replacement; Davis addition; new schools at Oxon Run and River Terrace; completion of Rudolph playroom; Seaton replacement; Stanton replacement; Bunker Hill addition.

Negro Elementary Schools
Ambush-Smallwood replacement; Birney replacement; Garrison addition; Harrison addition; Lovejoy addition, new school at Marshall Heights; new school north of Massachusetts ave. and west of North Capitol st.; Payne replament; Slater-Langston addition; Slowe completion; Stevens replacement; Syphax addition.

Thomas addition, new school north of East Capitol st. and west of 12th st. ne.; Turner addition; Walker-Jones replacement; Van Ness replacement; Young addition.

White Junior High Schools
Eliot gymnasium; Hine replacement; Macfarland and Stuart building improvements; new Sousa Junior High School.

Negro Junior High Schools
Banneker addition; Browne addition; Francis addition, including a cafeteria; new school at Pomeroy and Stanton rds. se.; Shaw and Terrell replacements.

White Vocational High Schools
Remodeling of the old Powell Junior High School to accommodate Bell Vocational High School.

Negro Vocational High Schools
Phelps gymnasium and assembly hall; Washington gymnasium and assembly hall.

White Senior High Schools
Coolidge stadium.

Negro Senior High Schools
Dunbar addition.

Dr. Corning listed the following elementary school that should be rehabilitated:

White
Blair, Brent, Congress Heights, Corcoran, Edmonds, Emery, Fillmore, Gage, Grant, Hyde, Jackson, Ludlow, Madison, Maury, Orr, Peabody, Petworth, Randle Highlands, Seaton, Takoma, Thomson, West.

Negro
Bell, Bruce, Burrville, Cleveland, Crummell, Garfield, Garrison, Harrison, Hayes, Langston-Slater, Lenox, Lovejoy, Magruder-Sumner, Monroe, Morgan, Morse, Moti, Phillips, Pierce, Taylor, Wilson, Wormley.

Along Our Street
with Aunt Penny

Last week we had one of those dark, rainy days when it's good to hear the crackle of a warm fire in the fireplace. A perfect day, I thought, to chat with a few friends on the telephone.

A few calls would have been all right, but before I knew it, I was monopolizing our telephone party line.

So that it wouldn't happen again, I jotted down a list of "party-line points" to remember when using the telephone. At the top of the list, I wrote "Always allow some time between calls so that others have a chance to use the line." The rest of the points were little more than rules of common courtesy. Such things as not interrupting when someone's talking on the line, except to make an extremely urgent call . . . or giving up the line quickly when someone needs it in an emergency. All in all, it's the "little things" that make our party-line service good service.

Police Boys' Club $250,000 Drive To Start Today

A campaign to raise $250,000 in memberships for the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will begin today with an "army" of policemen going into action on a door-to-door canvass of the entire city.

The goal this season is double that of any previous year. Campaign managers will recruit the efforts of hundreds of civic workers to reach the goal by March 1, the closing date of the drive.

Campaign Chairman Wash B. Williams has announced that Attorney General Tom Clark has accepted the chairmanship of the Federal Government division and has called on all branches of the Government to support the campaign.

Edwards Goes on Trial Today

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Thomas A. Edwards, 23, goes on trial tomorrow for last September's slaying of a young Glen Burnie couple.

The Anne Arundel County Negro is charged with the murder of John H. Mahlan, 25, and Mary C. Kline, 18.

Fifty-two witnesses have been summoned for the prosecution, 34 for the defense.

Mahlan and Miss Kline disappeared on a date September 17. Discovery of the young postal clerk's abandoned, blood-spattered car the next morning touched off a vast hunt. It ended in the finding of the two bodies three days later.

Ward French Elected Arthritis Group Head

Directors of the District chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation announced yesterday that Ward M. French, attorney, has been elected president.

Dr. Custis Lee Hall and Mrs. Samuel Dodek were named vice presidents. Treasurer is Richard A. Norris, executive vice president of the Lincoln National Bank. The new president described arthritis and rheumatism as "the most widespread and probably the most neglected of all diseases."

AFL Chiefs Predict New Wage Drives

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31.—Two top leaders of the American Federation of Labor yesterday predicted there would be strong pressure from organized labor for a fourth round of wage increases this spring.

AFL President William Green and Teamsters' President Daniel Tobin both belittled a recent announcement by the Bureau of Labor Statistics that there has been a slight drop in the cost of living.

"The drop in the cost of living has been inconsequential," Green said. "There's no question but that there'll be a demand for a wage increase to catch up with the cost of living."

Tobin, head of one of the AFL's largest unions and a powerful voice in the AFL executive council—holding its winter meeting here—denounced the latest cost of living report.

"We're not inclined to believe in its entirety the statistical reports of the Labor Department," Tobin declared. The Bureau of Labor Statistics is in the Labor Department.

The Teamsters own statisticians haven't found any drop in the cost of living, Tobin insisted. He made it clear that the powerful Teamsters union would press for higher wages.

Housing Policy Adopted

Meanwhile, in its opening session today, the AFL executive council adopted a four-point policy on housing, as follows:

1. Any solution to the housing crisis must include legislation to meet the needs of the urban workers in the middle-income brackets and agricultural workers—two groups "which have thus far been neglected..."

2. The council expresses general approval of the Ellender housing bill, particularly its provisions on public housing under which the AFL goal of one million low-rent units in four years is made possible.

3. Emphasis must be placed on the need for a housing census of 1950 to provide up-to-date data on requirements.

4. Rent control should be extended and strengthened for two years, or until such time as the shortage of rental housing has been met.

Bill Said to Fall Short

The AFL council stated that the United States should be building at least 1,500,000 homes annually, but that last year private builders constructed only 925,000 dwellings, "most of them at prices which workers could not afford." Altogether, there is a current deficiency of 10 million homes, according to the council's estimate.

The new Ellender housing bill is in many respects an improvement over the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, the council said, but it is not an acceptable solution to the housing problem "because it contains no provisions for middle income families or for agricultural workers and their families."

About 37 per cent of the American families are in the middle income group whose annual income is between $2000 and $4000, the council said. This group is ineligible for public housing and has been "utterly neglected" by private builders, and can only be met "by large scale construction of cooperative and rental housing within the means of these families," the council added.

President Green announced that the Independent Communications Workers of America, claiming 240,000 members, wants to join the AFL. He said the request was taken under advisement. The AFL's Electrical Workers have long claimed jurisdiction in the telephone field. The CIO has been also organizing telephone workers through a special committee.

Tobin Urges Speedy Passage of Administration's Labor Bill

Utah) said Attorney General Tom Clark will file a written statement today. Other witinesses will be Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, returned by the bill to a strengthened Labor Department, and Paul M. Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

At the start of yesterday's hearings, another liberal Republican, Senator Wayne Morse (Oreg.) served notice that it would take him three hours to examine Tobin, but later agreed to submit his questions in writing. Morse termed Tobin's statement "excellent," but said it needed to be supplemented by "evidence."

Later Morse told newsmen the Administration's bill was "better than the Wagner Act and better than the Taft-Hartley Act," but the provision on National emergency strikes was "not good enough."

He said he thought the NLRB should be given power to determine whether a union carries out the provision "in good faith."

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) told Tobin that in lifting the closed shop ban the bill should provide more "safeguards" for the individual workers against excessive initiation fees, dues and "other abuses."

Tobin conceded there might be some abuses but said the Labor Department hasn't received a single complaint. Taft snapped back that there haven't been any complaints because the Taft-Hartley Act outlawed the "abuses."

"If you attempt to legislate on all the abuses, you are going to have quite a large package," said Tobin. "We could fill up the bill with 100 to 200 provisions and make it too big."

The GOP Senators asked Tobin why the new bill drops the Taft-Hartley ban on political contributions by labor unions.

Tobin said it had no place in a labor law but should be considered separately by committees handling corrupt practices legislation. He said he favored return to the previous law which permits contributions and expenditures by unions. Corporations, he said, should be permitted to make political expenditures, but not contributions.

"That's an extraordinary statement," said Taft.

Aiken asked if the same restrictions shouldn't apply to unions and corporations. Tobin said he didn't think so, because union members lack the resources of corporations, who "can write their own check."

Tobin led off with a 16-point indictment of the Taft-Hartley Act. He charged it "brought confusion" to labor relations, limited the scope of collective bargaining, unnecessarily injected Government into labor disputes and abridged the rights of working men and women.

This is a diesel ...a modern locomotive that means better service to you.

Leaders of two unions think it's a feather-bed ...a "make work" grab that means less service to you.

● Leaders of unions representing railroad engineers and firemen seek to force railroads to add extra, needless men on diesel locomotives. This is sheer waste—a "make-work" program which would mean fewer improvements and higher costs—for YOU!

Railroads use modern diesel locomotives because they are one of the means of giving faster, better service to you.

Two men compose the crew of a diesel. They occupy a clean, comfortable cab at the front. The engineer handles the throttle. The fireman sits and watches the track ahead. With no coal to shovel, he has practically nothing else to do.

No Benefit To You

Now the leaders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen want to use the diesel locomotive as a means of forcing a feather-bedding scheme on the railroads. The extra men they propose to add to the diesel crews are not needed. There is no work for them.

The union leaders are fighting among themselves about which union should furnish these extra, needless men. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have even threatened a strike. You may not be interested in this dispute of these two unions, but you would be vitally concerned if these groups succeed in putting through this feather-bedding scheme, because it would mean a slowing up of the improvement program of the railroads—of which the diesel is the outstanding symbol.

Diesel crews are among the highest paid railroad employes—real aristocrats of labor! Their pay is high by any standard. Granting of these demands, therefore, would mean that the railroads would be paying out millions in unearned wages to those in the very highest pay brackets.

We'd Like To Spend This Money On You

You know how much the diesel has meant to you in increased speed, comfort and convenience. The railroads have many more of them on order for even greater improvement in service to you. But needless drains of money, such as this present demand of the unions for needless men on diesels, reduce the ability of the railroads to spend money on better service for you.

Proud as the railroads are of the diesel, it is only a small part of their improvement program. Since the War, literally billions of dollars have been spent on improvement of tracks and stations, on new passenger and freight cars, as well as on diesel locomotives, and on the many other less conspicuous details of railroading that contribute to improved service.

Feather-Bedding Means Less Service To You

But brazen feather-bedding schemes like the one now proposed would, if successful, divert large sums of money from our present improvement programs. Even worse, they make improvements like the diesel worthless, by making the cost of their operation prohibitive.

These demands are against YOUR interests—as well as those of the railroads. They are schemes to "make work". Neither you nor the railroads should be forced to pay such a penalty for progress.

That's why the railroads are resisting these "make work" demands to the last ditch—and why they are telling you about them.

Visiting Teams

About the middle of February the first of some 500 British factory workers and foremen will begin to arrive in the United States for on-the-spot schooling in American industrial know-how. Coming in a series of 15-man teams, each composed of technical men, supervisors, and ordinary production workers of a particular industry, they will spend six to eight weeks here. Most of their time will be spent "in residence," as it were, in corresponding American plants. They will even, according to plans, live in the homes of American workers of similar work function—to absorb as much as possible of the techniques and esprit that have made our production processes so successful.

The purpose, it hardly need be explained, is to see if some of these techniques cannot be taken back and applied to British production methods, especially those now relatively inefficient. The need for what may seem a rather elaborate program lies in human nature. Efforts to transfer know-how by oral and written explanation of better methods don't get enough results. Apparently the techniques have to be seen to be believed and actually tried. Even then, of course, there are obstacles to applying our methods to totally different situations in another country. But the benefits should certainly be sufficient to further the purpose of the Marshall Plan to put European production back on a self-sustaining basis.

This is the first concrete outcome of the proposal made last summer by Sir Stafford Cripps and Mr. Paul Hoffman for organized Anglo-American exchange of production information. If successful, it may well be expanded to other countries, and applied as well in advancing future programs of development in now underdeveloped areas. The possibilities are enormous. But the immediate lesson is even more encouraging—that British labor seems to be losing the fear of joblessness expressed in resistance to labor-saving devices. The visitors are assured of a hearty welcome from Americans who have come to admire the moral fiber which the British are exhibiting in their struggle for recovery.

Fleming Newbold

It was the irony of fate that brought death to Fleming Newbold on the very day that was, so to speak, to have capped his life-long career at the Washington Star. Death stepped in to prevent him from presiding over the annual meeting of stockholders of the Star company yesterday, the first such meeting since he succeeded to the presidency of the firm a year ago.

But Fleming Newbold's career really needed no such formal capping. It was a full and useful one. He had come up from the bottom of the ladder in the business management of the paper, which is one of the most successful and stable in the country. Since 1890, when he began as a 17-year-old clerk, his progressive ascent to more responsible positions reflected the man's intrinsic capacity to evaluate people and problems and to act with a decisiveness always sensitive to honesty and rightness.

In the death of Mr. Newbold, following so closely that of Frank B. Noyes, his brother-in-law and predecessor as president of the company, the Star has lost two of the Nation's outstanding newspaper executives. As we have felt keenly the loss of Mr. Noyes from among our friends and closest competitors, so shall we miss Fleming Newbold. We offer our sympathy to his family and to the Star.

Loyalty Test Case

In filing suit to compel Secretary of the Army Royall to specify the charges that brought about her dismissal as an Army employe on security grounds Eleanor Deak has raised an issue that vitally concerns all Government employes. For the Government's over-all loyalty program, as well as the laws applicable to employes of the military establishment, provide that national security warrants the withholding of detailed loyalty security charges. This particular suit does not challenge the Government's right and obligation to refuse to supply information that might endanger the national security. But it does raise the question as to whether a minor employe like Miss Deak can reasonably be regarded as a security risk necessitating suppression of charges. One of the surest ways to spread demoralization among Government personnel and bring the loyalty program into disrepute would be to make overliberal use of the national security clause as a reason for refusing to give suspected Government employes an opportunity to answer charges brought against them. For that reason the outcome of this first case testing the right of a Federal employe to be informed about the nature of charges that resulted in her dismissal on security grounds will be awaited with great interest.

New Diplomacy

There was a well deserved piece of praise for Dr. Philip Jessup in the New York Times the other day from the pen of Mr. James Reston. Dr. Jessup, protege and biographer of the great Elihu Root and a deep student and brilliant teacher of the law himself, was a member of the United States delegation at the recent U. N. meetings in Paris. As such, he did a most competent and distinguished service, as we ourselves had occasion fo observe.

The function of delegates to the United Nations is altogether different from the function that used to be fulfilled by delegates to the League of Nations. Old-timers will recall from Geneva days the emphasis that was put on oratory and decorum. Mr. Balfour once ventured to refer to some current freebooter or other as "a general of uncertain origin whose nationality nobody seems able to vouch for," and he rocked the Assembly! In the United Nations, thanks to the Soviet delegates, there has been a deterioration into name-calling, and a premium is put on the riposte and the ready answer when facts are mistreated. Dr. Jessup reminded many in his audience in Paris of the intellectual caliber of the great men of Geneva. He always made the most of his case and adorned it. In addition, he displayed a nimble wit in handling his opponents, and made use of all interruptions to press home his arguments with a kind of cumulative effect. Now he has gone back to the cloisters of Columbia, and, if he elects to stay there, the United States will lose a fine addition to its diplomatic representation.

This is Secretary Acheson's problem today—how to find and keep fit men for this kind of diplomatic service, and how properly to use them. He is reputed to feel that his own place is at headquarters, viz, Washington; and it is a wise decision. But the decision adds to his difficulty of getting first-class field representatives for duty as negotiators. He needs to organize and be represented by a team of negotiators who need not be constantly briefed. It is a bungling of function to have ambassadors accredited to particular governments acting in the role of peace negotiators. If Mr. Lewis Douglas is forever negotiating over the Ruhr, he cannot do the main job of Ambassador to Britain, which is to interpret that country to ours, and vice versa. In these days of rapid communication, perhaps this should be the Ambassador's only job. Negotiation could well be a separate function—for that reason as well as for peacemaking purposes. For sometime we have been suggesting the setting up of commissioners, or super-ambassadors, at key points for ironing out regional difficulties and encouraging a regional approach in our foreign policy. President Wilson's precedent after the first World War is an example in point. The objection has been entered by men versed in experience that such appointees might raise more problems than they settle, problems in their relations with territorial embassies. All right, let them be located in Washington, with a roving commission.

Very soon the Hoover plan for the reorganization of the State Department will be announced. This time, we hope, the plan will be thoroughgoing, taking account both of the air age and of our national eminence in the world of affairs. All that has been done hitherto has been to patch an organization which is basically archaic and to make do with the old system of representation for entirely new purposes. In this way the new needs have not been met and the old needs have been neglected. In the administration of foreign policy resides much of the Nation's hope of seeing peace with justice maintained, reconstruction guided, and a sense of community developed. Long due for discard is the improvisation which has done duty in meeting the requirements of the new diplomacy of which Dr. Jessup was a worthy exemplar.

Rent Pressure

The prospect of court action against the mass eviction of tenants organized by landlords in Tulsa probably will put the kibosh on further spread of the movement. As a means of protest against rent control, there was never much chance that such an uprising would stampede action by Congress, if only for the reason that there are more tenants than landlords. The tactics seem singularly short-sighted, for the antisocial attitude of the landlords in indiscriminately putting families on the street is likely to arouse far more sympathy for the victims than for any justified grievances of the property owners.

Although there can be no yielding to the demand for complete decontrol that would invite utter chaos in urban areas, any new rent-control legislation should, in our opinion, take into account that landlords as a class are being discriminated against. The object of such legislation should be to bring about conditions that will end the necessity for controls. For that reason we are happy to note that the new Administration bills introduced in both houses avoid the extremes of the Myers bill presented earlier. They do not, for example, provide for a rent rollback or the control of new housing.

The new measures, drawn up with the advice of Housing Expediter Woods, would extend rent control for two years, with the proviso that it could be lifted before that time either by the President or by Congress. Generally they would continue the same machinery now in effect for granting rent increases for justifiable cause. The bills would prohibit any further "voluntary" 15 per cent increases and would recontrol at the higher rate units covered by such leases. They would strengthen tenant protection by returning control over evictions to the Housing Expediter and enabling him to sue noncompliant landlords for triple damages on behalf of tenants. Altogether the bills would offer substantial guarantees against abuse with no more than necessary restrictions.

The test of progressive rent control is whether it aids new construction, which is the only solution to the housing shortage. The Administration proposal sensibly avoids controls which would stultify the new rental units now being built. The fact is, however, that virtually all this construction is beyond the reach of low-income families for whom protection is most necessary. If the protesting landlords would get together and demand bipartisan action on a bill to provide the sort of low-cost public housing where the critical need is not now being met by private enterprise, they would hasten the day when all rent controls can be abolished.

Mr. Stalin's Feeler

Premier Stalin's generalities have aroused little enthusiasm on this side of the Atlantic. The questions submitted to him by the International News Service were so worded that they gave an opportunity for furtherance of the Kremlin's so-called peace offensive without offering any tangible Russian contribution to the settlement of any issue. Undoubtedly Mr. Stalin would welcome an opportunity to sign a joint declaration with the United States asserting that neither government has any intention of resorting to war against the other. But both governments are already bound by non-aggression pledges through the United Nations. Additional words on this subject would have the effect of cheapening the currency of the U. N. Charter.

If the Stalin statement has any significance, aside from its propaganda value in the world-wide play for public opinion, it is to be found in his comment on Berlin. He sees no obstacle to lifting the Berlin blockade, if France, Great Britain and the United States will simultaneously lift the counter-blockade and postpone the establishment of a separate western German state, pending a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers to consider the problem of Germany as a whole. This may mean that Russia is feeling the pinch of the counterblockade whereas the air lift has deprived the Russian squeeze play on Berlin of its effectiveness. Twice recently the United States has rejected compromise proposals for lifting the blockade. This country's original terms, as we pointed out the other day, would now be an embarrassment instead of a victory.

In the light of this fact, Stalin would probably be delighted to trade lifting of the blockade for postponement of the idea of a separate west German state. But what does this condition to an agreement imply? It could easily be argued from Moscow that it would require delay of economic reconstruction in Germany and a return to the chaotic efforts to effectuate four-power control. Considering the regularity with which general Kremlin pledges have turned out to mean nothing more than strategic scheming to accomplish its own aims, something more concrete is needed as a basis for any possible negotiations. In response to a previous peace offensive of this sort, Undersecretary of State Lovett suggested that Moscow demonstrate its good will by concrete action on specific issues. That is still a good reply.

President Truman has let it be known once more that he is willing to meet Mr. Stalin in Washington. But of course both realize that such a meeting would be futile unless the Russians are ready to accommodate themselves to a policy of both liberty and recovery in Europe.

Combatting Hate

It is a somewhat disturbing commentary on the orientation of Washingtonians that they are more generous in responding to appeals for foreign aid than in meeting the needs of their own community. The desire to help anywhere is, of course, commendable, but the attitude of the open heart is most meaningful when it does not neglect local and regional responsibilities, beginning with the Community Chest, that should have first call on citizens' generosity.

The reasons which militate against giving a school-lunch program for Tannu Tuva priority while local needs remain unfulfilled do not apply, however, to the appeal of the American Friends Service Committee, which needs $1,500,000 to continue its program at home as well as abroad. This organization is perhaps the most selfless of all the agencies looking after the displaced and underprivileged. It has gone and been accepted virtually everywhere in a genuinely humanitarian spirit, and the concept of service which imbues its workers reduces its overhead to negligible proportions. The practical idealism of this Quaker group has been expressed in such diverse projects as feeding German children after World War I, succoring the Jews under Hitler, aiding coal miners during the depression, and directing a program for conscientious objectors, particularly in mental hospitals, during World War II. Now, in addition to its work in resolving racial and religious tensions in this country, it is active in an extensive relief and rehabilitation program in Europe and Asia, including countries behind the iron curtain and in the Middle East, in which latter place an Arab refugee problem has arisen of great proportions.

The human brotherhood which the Friends Service Committee practices is one of the most illuminating demonstrations of faith which inspires faith. Even this, however, requires financial support. Friends of the Friends may send their checks to the committee at 20 S. 12th st., Philadelphia 7, Pa., in the full knowledge that this money will be used to help cure that most dreadful of all diseases—the cancer of the heart that spreads through hate.

Correction

Our editorial of yesterday, "Case of M. Joliot-Curie," mistakenly gave the impression that the Paris newspaper France-Soir had condemned M. Joliot-Curie for placing the security of French atomic energy secrets above his membership in the Communist Party. M. Joliot-Currie actually was assailed by Ce Soir, a Communist newspaper, France-Soir, the largest newspaper in France, is of moderate Centrist orientation and has no connection with the Communist organ.

"Butterlegging"

Your editorial of January 28 indicates a singular amount of disregard for the welfare of millions of our citizens.

First, your editor betrays little concern about the possibility of millions of persons being served colored oleo when they ask for and pay for butter. A recent news story in the Philadelphia Inquirer, January 21, reports that 78 out of 300 Pennsylvania restaurants investigated were fraudulently serving oleo for butter. Investigators in eight principal cities reported to the Senate Finance Committee last year that one out of every three restaurants was thus deceiving the public.

Would your editors betray the same lack of concern if the restaurants involved were serving horse meat, while purporting to serve beef and charging beef prices? If not, why is one situation any different from the other?

Second, it is startling to find your editors unconcerned about the plight of the dairy farmers. Approximately 27 per cent of all milk goes into butter, and dairying is by far the largest single source of farm income in this country. In some States, such as North Dakota, as much as 92.5 per cent of the milk produced must seek butter outlets because consumers of fluid milk are not within marketing range. What do your editors propose to do about such dairy farmers? Would you merely plow them under for the benefit of 28 large oleo manufacturers?

I carefully say, "for the benefit of oleo manufacturers," because The Washington Post has in the past pointed out editorially and correctly that repeal of oleo taxes would not bring lower oleo prices to consumers.

Chiang And China

A salute to Admiral Yarnell, whose letter on Chiang and China appeared in your issue of January 22; I am glad to see a man of the admiral's stature speak out on the manner in which we have permitted vital American interests in China go by default to the Russo-Communists.

I will not waste any words in defense of "the Chiang regime." The nature of the Chiang regime was and is wholly immaterial to our main concern in China, which was simply to prevent that country from falling into the hands of the Communists and, ultimately, becoming another unit of Russian world power. We made use of the Chiang regime because it was the only lever at hand and because any attempt to create another more to our taste would cost us time when we had no time to spare.

Furthermore, the people who pretend to believe that, in seeking to influence or control the development of events in China, the United States has been motivated solely by a desire "to support and perpetuate the Chiang regime" are, by and large, the same people who have pretended to understand our efforts in Greece, Turkey, Iran, etc., as similarly motivated. Strangely enough, Moscow has expounded this same point of view.

It may be that few, if any, of these people are pro-Communist or even "pro-Russian"—if there is a distinction—but they certainly are allowing the Communist argument to condition their thinking.

Although few, if any, of our top leaders appear to have seen it that way, our country has been competing with Russia in China (as well as in Greece, Iran, Turkey, etc.), for control of a unit of world power. Thanks, at least in part, to the "American opponents of the corrupt Chiang regime," Russia—to all appearances—has added another unit to her sum-total of world power.

Rent Evictions

It looks as if we landlords here in Washington will have to do the same as landlords in other cities—mass evictions. Maybe if every landlord would evict, say, one fourth of all his tenants the first month, the second month, another fourth, and so on, we might get something like a 15 or 20 per cent blanket increase in our rents. We are certainly in need of an increase and every one knows it even the tenants.

"Musical Fares"

I enjoyed your January 25 editorial on music in street cars and buses, and beg that you lend every effort to prevent such a terrible thing coming to pass.

Before this thing is done, and it is not too late, I believe a group of some citizens, or some club, should start suit in court the moment the first radio appears, alleging a breach of the public peace.

There are still many street car and bus companies in the United States, where the fare is less than 10 cents, and it irks me considerably to have to pay 13 cents here, and be worried by the thought of having to listen to radio noise in addition. WILLIAM E. DIXON.

Boom-Bust Cure

I have read the very interesting letter of Mr. William Owen, appearing in your issue of January 23, in which he outlines a plan for doing away with our boom and bust economy.

Mr. Owen's idea of planned production would probably do the trick, but the many boards and inspectors that would be required to administer it would make the overhead very high.

In my opinion a much simpler plan would be to raise the social security taxes to a level that would produce funds enough so that when production overruns consumption to the extent that the factories are forced to close down, then the laid-off employes could draw sufficient unemployment benefits to keep up their purchasing power long enough to use up the surplus production and the factories could start up again.

Collectivism And Steel

President Truman's recommendation that legislation be passed to authorize Government construction of steel facilities "if action by private industry fails to meet our needs" has touched off a good deal of "collectivist" thinking.

The steel industry is condemned for not expanding, but the steel industry is not an entity. It is a mere name that we use to refer to certain types of activity composed of scores of individual enterprises.

But is not anyone or any group, with the means and the ability, privileged to go into the steel business? There are no legal or patent barriers to free entry. If I am in the packing or automobile business, have I any obligation to grow bigger?

To be sure, opening an integrated steel plant is a major undertaking, although partial processors and fabricators abound all over the place. Hundreds of steel-using plants could expand into steelmaking, and many have done so. If the steel outlook were good it would not be too difficult for newcomers to raise several millions of dollars to enter this business.

The very same groups that today are condemning "the industry" for not expanding were the ones 10 years ago (see TNEC Hearings and Monographs) who said that the industry was overexpanded. These same people today are also very vocal in condemning "economic concentration." If the "steel industry" followed their present advice, how long would it be before they would cry "concentration" even louder?

The same critics have become so allergic to profits that the steel industry is induced to quote its prices at a figure which will not supply much capital for plowing back. To erect an integrated steel mill today probably costs $400 per yearly ton of salable finished steel, the base price of which averages about $75 per ton, according to the Iron Age. On this new high investment base, nothing can be earned, after meeting raw material, (steel scrap, a major raw material costs $40 per ton), fuel, power, labor, depreciation, maintenance and other costs.

Under these conditions we are lucky that we are getting at least a million tons additional capacity per year. In fact, the steelmaking capacity of the American steel industry has risen from 82 million tons in 1939 to 96 million tons at the present time. Two million tons of additional steel capacity are scheduled for completion by various steel companies in 1949.

We have generated such hostility toward free market prices and we have become so allergic to profits that steelmakers are unwilling to charge buyers a price which will reproduce the assets and encourage new venture capital to move into the industry. If anyone denies this, let him state whether or not he is willing to buy stock in a new steel mill even under the ablest management.

It is indeed an interesting commentary on the thinking of our times that the United States with 7 per cent of the world's population and 55 per cent of the world's steel capacity, which last year enabled producers to ship the largest amount of finished steel in history, should now be threatened by its politicians with the medicine so fatefully tried in decadent Europe, now getting some 10 per cent of our free enterprise steel and steel products.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Government For Today

ST. LOUIS.—Events have a way of outdating the bravest words of philosophers and politicians. Sometimes this happens even as the speaker is uttering his noble sentiments.

From several Republicans at the national committee meeting in Omaha came the long familiar, yet nevertheless eloquent, plea for the preservation of freedom. In this view the Federal Government is an all-devouring, power-seeking monster deliberately bent on destroying America's ancient liberties.

While those words were being spoken, still another blizzard was raging outside the windows. Across the plains and in the Mountain States huge herds of cattle and bands of sheep are threatened with destruction. It can be a disaster of a magnitude not yet appreciated in the East.

One remedy that instantly occurred was the airplane. In the intervals when the weather abates, food can be dropped to animals otherwise cut off. This may not mean substantial help, but it is being tried.

The Federal Government is the only agency that can help in this way, because only the Air Force has the necessary equipment. So immediately the Governors of the States, Republican and Democratic alike, appeal to Washington for help with a hay-lift.

Here, it seems to me, is a striking example of how technology and the ever-increasing centralization of our world are tied together. Only a strong Federal Government can afford an Air Force. No sensible person would propose that each of the 48 States maintain its own force, complete with flying box-cars.

NOR IS IT POSSIBLE to suppress modern technology, with its ever-widening implications. Once the internal combustion engine was perfected and the Wright brothers made their first flight at Kittyhawk, everything followed, from the B-36 to the jet fighter that goes faster than sound. The airplane is here to stay.

In my opinion that is where the heartfelt eloquence of those who denounce big Government is off the beam. If you look realistically at it, you must conclude that perhaps the chief reason for the bigness of big Government is the effort to bring the fantastic new technology of the past 20 years within the framework of the kind of life we have known.

A second reason for the bigness of big Government is the bigness of big business. Corporations with several hundred thousand employes have an economic power greater than almost any State in the Union.

There is a danger from big Government, and a very real danger. To centralize the direction of all functions in Washington is to destroy initiative and incentive and to invite breakdown.

It is just here that the Republican Party could play a vital role in pointing out a reasonable middle course. But this cannot be done as long as so many leaders in the party continue merely to denounce the New Deal and point with passionate devotion to the past.

ONE REPUBLICAN at Omaha said more or less that in a speech which got almost no notice. That was Nebraska's Gov. Val Peterson, a veteran of World War II, reelected last fall by a majority more than twice that of Governor Dewey.

Peterson spoke straight from the shoulder to warn that if the dead hand of the past continued to dominate, the end for the party was extinction. He said:

"We must recognize that Government does have an appropriate place in our lives beyond that of validating property titles, putting out fires and arresting burglars. The principle of individual initiative is a good one, but the utilitarian doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number, or that of subordinating the individual to the public welfare, has an equally honorable place in our society."

The audience that heard this had just wildly applauded the booming emptiness of Senator Kenneth Wherry's oratory. It was hard to tell whether they were listening to the earnest young Governor. When Peterson sat down, Toastmaster Wherry turned to introduce Senator Homer Capehart of Indiana as "a real Republican who talks like a Republican."

He may not have meant this as a slur on the Governor of his State, but to some in his audience it sounded that way. As the old slogan has it, you pays your money and you takes your choice. In recent years the American people have been putting their money on those who seem to have at least some sense of the realities of the mid-twentieth century.

"Gieseking's Departure"

In all the confusion about the Gieseking case, nothing is more confused than this sentence from your January 30 editorial on his departure:

"But musicians and other artists are not, perhaps unfortunately, less susceptible than other people to what passes in their own countries as patriotism. To expect them to act in the role of traitors—as it would be interpreted under totalitarianism—is simply to expect too much—more than we would expect or tolerate in American artists in time of war."

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Stalin's Interview

WITH Stalin's interview it is now certain that matters are coming to a head and that a diplomatic showdown in Europe during the next few months is in the making. The issues are grave and the stakes are high. No one who realizes them will wish to see the matter dealt with hurriedly in a press conference or in an off-the-record briefing.

Lippmann

Thus it would be a blunder of the first magnitude, one which would weaken seriously our whole position, to slam the door in Stalin's face. For then we would present ourselves to the world as the great power which had refused to explore all the possibilities of peace.

It would be as great a blunder to act as if the time had come for Mr. Truman to start packing his bags for a meeting with Stalin. For that would convince our allies, and the Russians as well that we had not understood how thorny are the problems which have to be worked out before even a modus vivendi can be reached.

THE SHOWDOWN, which is coming, will turn upon whether the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Security Pact, and the Council of Europe are to be treated as a coalition for war or as the framework for a European settlement. The issue is plainest in the Security Pact, and most specifically at the two points where the U. S. S. R. has reacted over the weekend—first in the Russian note to Norway and immediately thereafter in Stalin's reference to the Berlin blockade and the western German state.

THE ORIGINAL members of the North Atlantic Security Pact are Britain, France, the Benelux countries in western Europe, Canada and the United States in North America. Limited to these countries, the pact could not be challenged by the Soviet Union and its allies. They are themselves bound together by a network of 16 treaties, of which the first was between the U. S. S. R. and Czechoslovakia in 1943 and the latest between the U. S. S. R. and Finland, published on April 6, 1948.

The crucial fact about this Soviet network of bilateral treaties and the North Atlantic multilateral treaty is that the two systems do not meet. Between them lies a borderline of nations which are not now included in either system, — namely the three Scandinavian countries, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy.

The two systems can be regarded as defensive as long as neither expands into this neutral borderland which separates them. We should certainly regard a Russian proposal for a military alliance with any country in the borderland as deeply disturbing. We must not expect the Russians to be complacent about a similar proposal on our part, and it would be folly to imagine that they will not react strongly if such proposals are carried out.

THE CASE of Italy is probably the least serious. For Italy is in contact with the Soviet orbit only on the Yugoslav frontier, and as long as Titoism is able to survive, no serious military consequences are likely to follow from Italy's inclusion in the Atlantic system. Switzerland will, of course, not enter any alliance, and presumably no one will have the heart to inflict upon Austria, if it is liberated by a peace treaty, the burden of an alliance.

The serious cases are Scandinavia and Germany. In regard to Scandinavia, the State Department and the Pentagon have—it is now quite plain—used very bad judgment. Their desire to include Norway and Denmark in our strategic arrangements has divided the Scandinavian countries among themselves, has subjected them to serious internal strains, has jeopardized the precarious but relatively independent position of Finland, and has exposed Norway to a most embarrassing diplomatic pressure by the Soviet Union.

BUT THE crucial case is Germany. Here, it must be said, our attitude is ambiguous and contradictory. The official position, reiterated in the Security Board provision of the recent Ruhr agreement, is that we propose to keep Germany disarmed and demilitarized. But it would be disingenuous to pretend that there is not a powerful current of opinion in this country, in Great Britain, in Germany, and even in France that, without the re-creation of a German army and German war industry under German command, German manpower and the German industrial potential may eventually be integrated with the North Atlantic system.

That is where and why the proposed western German state, in its essence a puppet state of the Western military occupation, has such portentous diplomatic importance. No doubt many of those who have sponsored the idea of this German government honestly think it is designed only to assist German economic recovery within the Marshall Plan. But this innocent view is confined almost entirely to Americans. It is certainly not held by the Germans who know quite well that in a divided and warlike Europe a government without an army is a contradiction in terms, and that a government, created by an alien military occupation, must either rebel against the occupation or become allied with it.

THE AMBIGUITY of our German policy is the supreme danger to the North Atlantic Pact, to the Council of Europe and to the Marshall Plan. The ambiguity will have to be resolved. That could be done, it seems to me, by excluding Germany definitively from the North Atlantic Pact, and by an offer to Russia, Poland, and Czechoslovakia to negotiate a parallel pact which would, along the lines of the original Vandenberg proposal, the Byrnes treaty, the Potsdam protocol, and the recent Ruhr agreement, confirm the demilitarization and neutralization of Germany.

STALIN is his interview says that Russia is prepared to consider the issuance of a declaration that the U. S. S. R. and the United States have no intention of resorting to war. Such a declaration would carry much greater weight if it rested on a treaty about the demilitarization of Germany. Only if the West and the East abandon the idea of incorporating Germany into their military systems, can they be sure of being able to carry out their intention not to resort to war.

For as long as Germany is considered a military makeweight which could turn the balance of power decisively, the Germans—not the Russians and not the Americans, French and British—will in the end decide whether there is to be war or peace.

Off The Record

44,000 Units Termed Unfit

people, said NCHA, noting that "the Board of Public Welfare must care for their children when they are evicted."

3. Only 16 families were evicted from NCHA-operated units in fiscal 1948 out of a total of 1450 suits filed in local courts.

4. The city's 4884 temporary war housing units—many on the verge of collapse—should be "removed at the earliest possible moment."

Some to Be Torn Down

Unless permanent low-rent dwellings are built in the near future, NCHA emphasized, the present list of 18,000 families needing housing will greatly increase because some of its temporary units "must now be demolished."

"Washington is a very good place to visit," Ihlder said in his introductory statement, "but Washington is a very bad place to live for many thousands of families who occupy its slums, its cheap rooming houses and the residue of old alley dwellings."

Ihlder said some of the 44,000 substandard dwellings are "deteriorated mansions of former days, each built for occupancy of one well-to-do family, now subdivided by several low-income families.

"Others are old houses built for middle-class families, but today occupied by a low-income family in every room. These are the end results of a 'trickle-down' process that began long before the days of our grandfathers, but which surprisingly enough, is now circulated as a 'theory.'"

During the past fiscal year 167 persons moved out of NCHA dwellings and a total of 276 families were admitted to permanent low-rent NCHA units.

The report further noted that 93 of its new tenahts formerly lived in areas which contained 77 per cent of the District's unfit housing.

The heaviest concentration of addresses of new tenants was found in the "decayed northwest section which extends from Florida ave. southward to Massachusetts ave., and from North Capital st. westward to Fourteenth st.," observed NCHA, adding that low-income families in Washington today are financially unable to find housing in slum-free areas.

When the "flimsy" temporary war housing units may be razed, NCHA pointed out, depends on two factors:

1. The erection of proper permanent low-rent housing into which low-income tenants of the temporaries may move, and

2. The collapse of the flimsiest temporaries. Many of them violate the regulations of the District and are not acceptable as dwellings, the report added.

The housing authority laid blame for Washington's low-rent housing shortage to unfilled promises of the private building industry which "prevent additional public housing," to NCHA's loss of authority to acquire sites and proceed with a public housing program and to the failure of Congress to appropriate funds for the Redevelopment Land Agency.

Sound Truck Curb Upheld

in addition to permitting a cigarette firm, for example, to advertise its cigarettes on its own trucks, is solely within the police regulation power of local authorities, said the high court.

In the sound truck decision, five separate opinions were handed down, and there was no majority opinion, only a majority judgment.

Last year, the high court ruled 5 to 4 that a Lockport, N. Y. ordinance under which Samuel Saia was fined and jailed for not having a loud speaker permit, was unconstitutional. That ordinance was overruled because the police chief had sole authority to decide who should get a permit.

Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Rutledge, Murphy, Douglas and Black joined in the Saia decision.

In yesterday's case, Charles Kovacs, international representative of the CIO United Steel Workers, had been fined $50 in a test case for violating the Trenton ordinance governing sound trucks.

Justice Reed announced the judgment in an opinion in which Chief Justice Vinson and Justice Burton joined.

Reed said that the New Jersey Supreme Court had ruled that the ban involved only "loud and raucous noises," and:

"We think it is a permissible exercise of legislative discretion to bar sound trucks with broadcasts of public interest, amplified to a loud and raucous volume, from the public ways of municipalities," without injuring rights of freedom of speech.

Are Free to Act

Justice Frankfurter concurred, but added, "Nor is it for this court to devise the terms on which sound trucks should be allowed to operate, if at all," for he said legislatures are free to act as long as they do not attempt to prescribe ideas.

Justice Jackson also concurred, but he said the decision repudiated the Saia decision, from which he had dissented, and added he believed the Trenton ordinance bans all sound trucks. Comparison with the Saia decision, he said, "I think, will pretty hopelessly confuse municipal authorities as to what they may or may not do."

Justice Murphy dissented without written opinion.

Justice Black, in a dissent in which Justices Douglas and Rutledge joined, agreed that the Trenton ordinance bans all sound trucks, "and it strains the imagination to say that the ordinance itself would warrant any other interpretation.

Preference Given Others

"If Trenton can completely bar the streets to the advantageous use of loud speakers," he said, all cities can do the same, and preference is given those who can afford newspaper, radio or motion picture advertising.

Justice Rutledge, in addition to joining the Black dissent, wrote a separate dissent in which he declared:

"In effect, Kovacs stands convicted, but of what it is impossible to tell, because the majority upholding the conviction do not agree upon what constituted the crime. How, on such a hashing of different views of the things forbidden, Kovacs could have known with what he was charged or could have prepared a defense, I am unable to see. How anyone can do either in the future, under this decision, I am equally at loss to say."

Changes At State

By Sumner Welles

Hoover Recommendations Praised

A THOROUGH - GOING reorganization is more urgently needed in the State Department than in any other Executive department. For the department is operating at its lowest level of efficiency in 40 years.

The last effective reorganization took place in 1937.

The much - ballyhooed reorganization undertaken during the brief Stettinius interlude amounted to little more than a painting and plumbing job and the renaming of a few bureaus and divisions.

Confusion worse confounded reigned during the succeeding Byrnes regime. After General Marshall became Secretary of State conditions became still worse.

We have surely had no abler Chief - of - Staff than General Marshall. His exceptional administrative ability contributed immeasurably to the victory of 1945. But the kind of organization which produces an efficient war machine does not necessarily provide an efficient foreign office.

The State Department cannot function successfully unless the Secretary of State is himself an integral part of the machine. If it is to operate effectively the Secretary cannot isolate himself behind the screen of his own secretariat. He must be willing to keep in close touch with his chief subordinates. He must confer personally with foreign diplomats and with our own ambassadors abroad and he must personally explain the nature and objectives of American policy through daily press conferences. If the Secretary is no more than a name to a majority of the department's key officials, the morale of the department must inevitably break down.

WHEN General Marshall was appointed Secretary of State an effort was made to remodel the State Department in the image of the General Staff. The results were disastrous. A single Assistant Secretary of State, for instance, was made responsible for our political relations with every other country of the world. Former War Department officials and Army officers, wholly devoid of any experience in foreign affairs, were appointed to important administrative positions in the State Department.

If the department is to become the efficient operational agency for which present world conditions so clearly indicate the need, drastic reforms are urgently required.

The Hoover Commission's recommendation that two Deputy Undersecretaries and eight Assistant Secretaries of State be appointed is altogether sound. So is the commission's further recommendation that the economic and functional divisions of the department should be radically reduced and that high policy-making officials should be relieved of purely administrative responsibilities.

The commission properly stresses the need for a decentralization of authority and for the assumption by the assistant secretaries of operational responsibility on a regional basis. The commission's insistence that the department should have jurisdiction over propaganda and intelligence services is fully justified.

I CANNOT, however, agree with the Hoover Commission's conclusion that the State Department should continue to shirk responsibility for the administration of our occupations of Germany and Japan. These American occupations involve the very foundation of American foreign policy. Nor can I concur in the commission's recommendation that the Secretary of State be compelled in certain instances affecting foreign issues to defer the Cabinet-level committees. If the Department of State, subject to the President, is to formulate our foreign policy, the Secretary of State must retain the final say in all decisions affecting our foreign relations.

The commission's recommendations concerning the foreign service and the department's officials are admirable. There is no country today that has a more competent foreign service than that of the United States.

It is high time that the Congress should give our foreign service and our State Department officials the special status which the commission recommends. It is high time that American public opinion should realize that American foreign service officers are not the ineffective cookie pushers they are represented to be in certain sections of the press, but that they are, on the contrary, a group of exceptionally able, hard working and patriotic men who are rendering outstanding service to this country.

IT IS also high time that Congress and the public should take the trouble to appraise realistically the national value of the work done for the United States during the past decade by such foreign service ambassadors as Joseph C. Grew, Jefferson Caffery, Norman Armour, Leland Harrison, Nelson Johnson, Edwin C. Wilson, Harry Norweb and Paul Daniels, to name but a few of many, and then to decide whether this country can afford in the most critical times to have such experienced and invaluable representatives overseas periodically replaced by generals or by admirals or by unqualified political appointees.

Because of the leading part that he has played in drafting the report of the Hoover Commission, Secretary Acheson is in a favorable position to procure from the Congress prompt action upon his recommendations for State Department reorganization. He has the further great advantage of being able to count upon the wholehearted cooperation of the most enlightened foreign relations and foreign affairs committees that have served in the Congress for many years.

Widdifield, 74, Retires As Supreme Court Aide

Samuel E. Widdifield, 74, retired yesterday as an assistant clerk to the United States Supreme Court. He had served with the clerk's office for the past 18 years, and except for short periods had been associated with the court since 1905.

Mr. Widdifield came to the court in 1905 as law clerk to Justice Rufus W. Peckham, then served successively as law clerk to Justices Joseph Lamar, John H. Clarke and George Sutherland.

In 1924 he left the court to join the German Mixed Claims Commission of the State Department, and in 1930 he had his own real estate business in North Beach, Md., where he was elected mayor. Later he was assistant clerk of the House Judiciary Committee.

Federal Aid Education Bill Action Delayed

The Senate Education and Labor Committee held what one member deescribed as a "rump session" yesterday to discuss the Federal aid to education bill, but was forced to postpone any action until today.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) raised an objection to the committee meeting while the Senate was in session, an act prohibited by the reorganization law.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), another committee member, said the committee might be able to report out a bill today.

He predicted that the committee would move for separate passage of the 300-million dollar Federal aid to education bill and a 35-million dollar school health fund recently offered as an amendment.

The Florida Senator said the majority of the committee members favored the health fund but felt it should be introduced as separate legislation.

Majority sentiment in the committee, he said, was in favor of adopting that section of the Federal aid bill which would leave it up to the individual States to determine whether or not any parts of the fund should be used for parochial as well as for private schools.

Morse, meanwhile, said he would continue to object to any committee meeting while the Senate is in session.

He charged that the reorganization law is now being honored more in the breach than the observance and that because of this conduct the Senate's business had not been improved "one iota."

Hamilton Nets $4.91 a Share; Gross Sets Top

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of Hamilton National Bank totaled $429,801 in 1948, after Federal income taxes, equal to $4.91 a share on capital stock, President Wilmer J. Waller reported in his annual statement to stockholders.

Waller

This compared with net of $379,783 or $4.41 a share in the previous year.

The results for 1948 "greatly exceeded our expectations," Waller noted. Gross operating earnings of $742,459 set a new record for the bank which was founded in 1933. This compared with $568,831 in the previous year.

Loans granted during the past year aggregated $34,143, 727, compared with $27,889,965 in 1947. On December 31, 1948, portfolio of loans stood at $24,577,216, an increase of $3,942,000 during the year.

Waller emphasized a trend "back to the more traditional business of banking." He pointed out that during 1948 more than 59 per cent of the bank's total interest income was derived from loans and 41 per cent from securities. In 1947 securities accounted for about 53 per cent of total interest income.

Capital funds at the end of 1948 amounted to $5,109.008, against $5,027,455 at the end of 1947. However, the bank is now carrying $227,438 in reserve for bad debts. On a truly comparative basis, capital funds at the end of 1948 would aggregate $5,336,446.

LEADERS: Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath led Washington underwriters in amount and Johnston, Lemon & Co. ranked first in number of underwritings last year in Washington. The Auchincloss firm participated in 27 issues totaling $8,525,000, while the Johnston firm took part in 39 issues aggregating $5,932,000. Other local leaders, according to the Investment Dealers Digest, were Folger, Nolan & Co., $5,501,000 for 22; Mackall & Coe, $735,000 for 8; Ferris & Co., $688,000 for 9; Robert C. Jones & Co., $578,000 for 7; Goodwyn & Olds, $384,000 for 6, and Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukens, $334,000 for 6.

ODD LOTS: February retail sales will be 6 per cent greater than in the same 1948 month, Sales Management magazine predicted yesterday . . . The steel industry has scheduled operations this week at 100.9 per cent of rated capacity, slightly under last week's rate of 101.1 per cent . . . Germany's industrial products will be displayed in America for the first time since the war in an elaborate exhibition opening April 9 at New York's Museum of Science and Industry . . . Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. asked ICC authority to issue $10,665,000 of equipment trust certificates . . . Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. reported its backlog of work totaled nearly 200 million dollars on December 31, 1948, against $54,182,957 on December 31, 1947 . . . The auditors' section of the District Bankers Association has named committees to handle the eleventh Eastern regional conference of the National Association of Bank Auditors and Controllers, scheduled May 25 to 28 in the Mayflower.

AMONG LARGEST: Based on yearend deposits, four Washington banks are among the 300 largest in the United States, according to the annual "Roll Call" of the American Banker. The local banks and their rank are Riggs National, fifty-fifth; American Security & Trust Co., 120th; Hamilton National, 196th, and National Savings & Trust Co., 219th. The five national leaders in their respective order are Bank of America, San Francisco; National City Bank, New York; Chase National Bank, New York; Guaranty Trust Co., New York, and Manufacturers Trust Co., New York.

WHO'S WHO TODAY — Mrs. Lois F. Wannon has been promoted to home furnishings coordinator at Woodward & Lothrop. A graduate of University of Maryland, she joined the department store in 1946 after teaching interior design at the Abbott Art School . . . C. Carney Smith has been appointed general agent of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. in Washington. He will be honored at a luncheon February 11 in the Mayflower . . . Lewis E. Zender has been named public relations director of the American Steel & Wire Co. . . . William A. P. Bagley has been elected president of the International Bottlers Association.

Mrs. Wannon

CLEARINGS—January bank clearings in Washington got off to an inauspicious start, totaling $296,546,165 against $300,050,588 in the same 1948 month. The Inauguration Day holiday was believed the principal cause for the dip.

EARNINGS: Universal Pictures Co., Inc., reported a net loss of $3,162,812 for the fiscal year ended October 30, compared with net income of $3,230,017 in preceding year. Other earnings statements:

Writer on Bikini Bomb Tests Will Address Post Luncheon

David Bradley, chronicler of the Bikini atomic bomb tests, will speak at the February 9 Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon at Hotel Statler.

Bradley

Dr. Bradley will speak at the luncheon as author of the fast-selling book, "No Place to Hide," a straightforward, day-by-day account of his observations as "radiological monitor" at Bikini. Bradley's job was to see that no one was hurt at the test.

Bradley is a doctor by profession, but no stranger to writing. A 1938 graduate, he studied in England for awhile, then went into free lance writing and received a newspaper assignment to cover the Russo-Finnish war.

Other authors on the panel: Sterling North, whose book "So Dear to My Heart" has been made into a movie by Walt Disney; Ernestine Gilbreth Carey, coauthor with her brother, Frank B. Gilbreth, jr., of "Cheaper By the Dozen," and Sigmund Spaeth, who has written a total of 22 books in the music field, the most recent of which is "A History of Popular Music in America."

Luncheon tickets are on sale at $3 in the book departments of Woodward & Lothrop and Kann's and at these book stores: Better Mouse Trap, Wm. Ballantyne's, Brentano's main store and branches, Community, Francis Scott Key, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's, Savile and Whyte's.

81 Hurt in British Railroad Accidents

London, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Eighty-one persons were injured today in train accidents in Scotland and England.

Seventy-six were injured at Glasgow when a shipyard workers' train plowed into a train in a station. At East Horndon, near London, five persons were cut by flying glass when the door of a train flew open and smashed windows of a train passing in the opposite direction.

RELIEF AT LAST For Your COUGH

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Waiter Is First Law Student in Okla. School

Oklahoma City, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—A 34-year-old Oklahoma City waiter, T. M. Roberts, today became the first student at Langston University Law School for Negroes in the State capitol.

The school was established a year ago to meet a United States Supreme Court order that equal facilities must be provided for Mrs. Ada Fisher or she be admitted to the all-white University of Oklahoma Law School at Norman.

Mrs. Fisher refused to enroll, contending the school did not offer equal facilities. She reopened her case which now is on appeal to the State supreme court.

New Mail Catalog Shows Price Cuts

New York, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—Price reductions of as much as 33 per cent were shown today in the new spring and summer mail-order catalog of National Bellas Hess, Inc.

The maximum cuts were made on women's cotton dresses with smaller reductions on women's wearing apparel and house furnishings. Shoes were reduced by varying amounts, yard goods were down 25 per cent and rayons 10 to 15 per cent.

Soybean Supply Sets New Peak

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that stocks of soybeans on January 1 totaled 179,563,000 bushels—the largest on record for that date.

These stocks were a fourth larger than a year earlier.

The department also reported stocks of flax seed on January 1 totaled 39,309,000 bushels compared with 27, 836,000 bushels on that date a year ago.

Dupont Seeks to List Workers' Bonus Stock

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 31 (A.P.).—The Dupont Co. today asked for permission to list with the New York Stock Exchange additional common stock not exceeding 58,000 shares.

The new stock is to be issued to company employes in connection with bonus awards for 1948, and is not being offered for public sale.

The company's bonus plan—in effect for more than 40 years—allows employes awarded bonuses to receive a part of the award in shares of the new stock issue and the balance in cash.

Loan Institute Plans To Open 4-Day Parley

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Starting with the auditors and controllers, and ending with the public relations experts, the savings associations' personnel from all over the country will have a four-day conference in Boston, February 9-12, under auspices of American Savings and Loan Institute.

The meeting, expected to draw an attendance of 500, is the 24th annual midwinter conference of the institute, the educational organization of the savings associations. Mrs. Ruth M. Lowe, only woman president in its 27 years' history, will preside.

Baltimore to Lisbon Ship Service Set Up

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—Direct steamship service between Baltimore and Lisbon, Portugal and North African ports will be inaugurated February 11 by the American Export Lines.

The first trip of the direct express cargo service will be made by the S. S. Extavia, the steamship lines said. She and her 17-knot sister ships will load and discharge here and at Norfolk, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

Vice President John E. Slater said the company had taken immediate steps to initiate the service after Portugal's recent removal of discrimination against American flag vessels.

Visible Grain Supply

Chicago, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—Visible supply of wheat decreased 1,154,000 bushels to 113,433,000 bushels this week, the Board of Trade reported today. Corn increased 798,000 to 47,085,000 bushels, oats decreased 221,000 to 8,415,000, rye decreased 231,000 to 3,675,000, barley decreased 46,000 to 11,487,000 and soybeans decreased 774,000 to 8,928,000 bushels.

Jap Market to Reopen

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—The Japanese Stock Exchange, closed since the war, will be reopened as another step toward economic recovery, General MacArthur announced today.

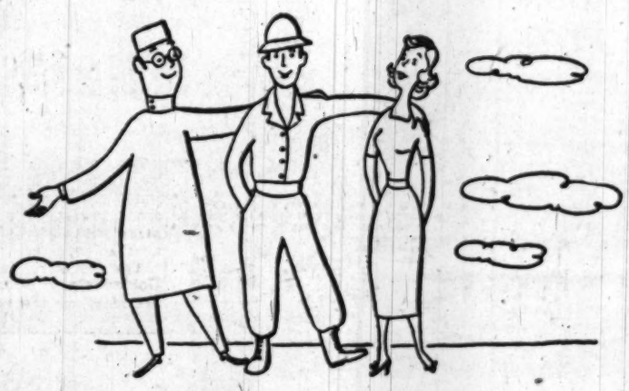
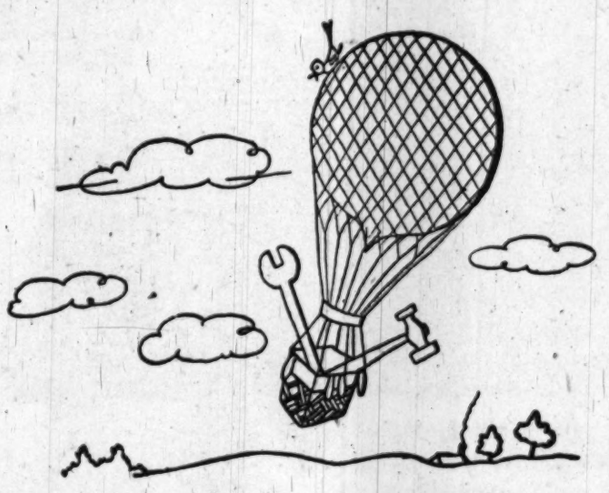
At Shell it represents a gross investment of $32,500

Better jobs result as Shell continues its modernization and expansion program—already the largest in company history...



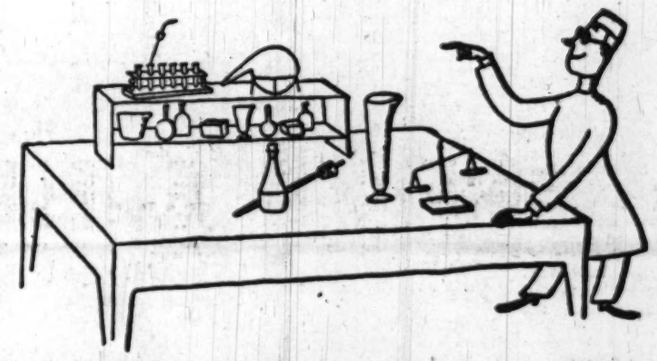
It takes all kinds:

Filling your demands for Shell products takes work in 1152 different kinds of jobs—and each employee must be "outfitted" with his own special tools . . . ranging from pencils to complex refinery equipment. Shell's investment in plant and equipment, divided by number of employees, works out to $32,500 a job.



Tools go up:

Considering the way costs have gone up and the way products have improved, you won't be surprised to know that it now takes $1300 worth of equipment to process a barrel of crude oil per day—where $350 was once enough. But, if gasoline prices had climbed at this same rate, you'd be paying 80¢ a gallon, instead of about 20¢ . . . taxes excluded.



Today's multiplication table:

From petroleum, Shell now makes over 1000 different products for your use. You may pay only pennies for a product, yet millions must be invested to make it. For example: $15,000,000 was just spent for a plant which produces finer lubricating oils.

Equipped for progress:

Each Shell employee is now backed by plant and productive equipment which cost $32,500—at a time when tools, more than ever before, are essential to his maximum production. The petroleum industry's investments mean more and better jobs, as well as more and better products for consumers.

Shell Oil Company, Incorporated

SHELL

A forward-looking company serves all 4:

1. The Consumer—through fair prices, good service, and the development of new and better products.
2. The Community—through actions that promote local and national welfare in peace or war.
3. Its Employees—through job security, fair wages, and the opportunity to advance.
4. Its Shareholders—through a fair return on their investment.

One on the Aisle—

Boston Rep Has 30-Grand Loss

By Richard L. Coe

ROUND THE WORLD IN 80 SECONDS: Boston's Repertory Theater closed its season Saturday night, a $30,000 loss on the books for a 12-week season. . . . There's an outside chance the group may try again next year, but the real trouble lay in not having enough cash to start with; ANTA's seal of approval was withdrawn when it was ascertained that actual backing didn't live up to advance promises. . . . Several weeks were very fine, notably Mady Christians joining the resident company for "Heartbreak House" and the final bill of "Richard III," with Richard Whorf as adapter-designer and star. . . . So successful was this one that it's being taken to New York next week, with Philip Bourneuf, Frances Reid, Polly Rowles (remember her at Olney?) and Grace Copping in their Boston roles. . . . The Boston lesson for theater dreamers is: Don't try it unless you've plenty of cash.

JOHANNESBURG these nights is lining up for "Oklahoma!" . . . This fourth company of the Rodgers-Hammerstein classic is principaled with many folks who've played at one time or another in the National's visiting companies. . . . The South African run looks like a long one; London's continues to sell out at the Drury Lane; Philadelphia has the National Company this week, and Wheeling, W. Va., gets the New York Okies. After Jo-burg, the Yanks move on to Capetown, and it looks as if eventually everyone from Cairo to the Cape will be singing, "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning!"

PHILADELPHIA is turning out for Arthur Miller's new play, "Death of a Saleman," which closes Saturday night at the Locust, bound for a Gotham opening on the 10th . . . The new drama from the author of "All My Sons" gets a unique rave in the current Variety . . . "Bandying about adjectives like great and superb is always a profitless business, but a lot of people are going to liuk them to the new play," says Variety's Waters . . . Not in 30 years as a Philadelphia reporter, he says, has he seen "a more vociferous and enthusiastic performance of a new dramatic play here."

CHEVERLY'S Cheverly Theater is spreading the red carpet for a vaudeville and movie show benefiting all local units of the county boys' club organization . . . Nora Williams, who's done a television date with Johnny Bradford since I wrote of her last week, is on the bill with her rowdy-dowdy songs, as are the Happy Hicks, the Honey Boys, Bob Garrison, Billy Wilson and Johnny Reh, with Arthur Manville's band and Art Brown as emcee, "among others."

HONOLULU is looking ahead and THAT should give this Capital pause . . . Seems the Honolulu Community Theater wants to resume, but, as here, it can find no theater . . . Outside of a few school auditoriums, no adequate stage plant exists, a traveler reports . . . Where have you heard that before? . . . But get this: Because of Hawaii's drive toward Statehood, Honolulu's conscious of its rank as capital of the Nation's potential forty-ninth State and feels badly it has no suitable theater . . . Evidently Washington's plight hasn't percolated out to Oahu . . . Oh, my little grass shack!

FAIRLINGTON'S newly formed players has decided on "The Pursuit of Happiness" as its opening play, March 17, 18 and 19 at Fairlington School . . . There probably won't be many more amateur productions of this veteran comedy, for the Guild is planning a musical version of it for next season and custom decrees that in such cases the original rights be withdrawn . . . In the bundling comedy will be Mollie Maser, Clifford Johnson, Harrey Carey, Deen Evans, Priscilla Sangster, Josephine Barrett, Ronald Lum, John Marshall, L. C. Holm, Wayne and Dwayne Holm.

NORTH CAROLINA'S stirring for "The Lost Colony" already . . . One yearly advance of this event is a clambake of the State's honorary Tarheels . . . This six-day, six-night saturnalia is set for Nags Head and the Carolinian beginning April 15, and you'll be hearing plenty of fishing yarns as April nears, for the adopted Tarheels are a talkative set.

IN THE WALDORF Towers suite of Cole Porter, a pipe rang . . . The voice told Porter that this was Jascha Heifetz, wondering if the composer could get him tickets to his sensational hit, "Kiss Me Kate" . . . The violinist had tried fruitlessly for a month . . . "Will do," said Porter, "if you can get me tickets to your next recital. I've been trying to get THOSE for a month."

Bandits Posing As Repairmen Get $60,000

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Two armed bandits who posed as escalator repairmen robbed the Mercantile National Bank of Miami Beach of between $60,000 and $75,000 today.

The gunmen knocked a hole in the wall of the bank's night deposit room, bound, gagged and handicuffed two tellers and threw them in a closet.

S. W. Curry, cashier, said the gunmen got between $60,000 and $75,000 in currency. The estimate, he said, was based on last week's Monday morning night deposits.

"The robbers," he said, "left two sacks of coins behind, probably because they were too heavy."

Miami Beach Detective Sam Frederick described the robbery as a "very well-planned job." The bank is on famed Lincoln rd., and its president is Marcie Liberman, mayor of Miami Beach.

Frederick said the gunmen began the operation Saturday when they appeared at the Miami Beach Theater, adjacent to the bank, in the guise of escalator repairmen.

They cut a panel from the theater's checkroom which led to the escalator. Then they knocked a hole in the fire wall which led into the night deposit room.

When they left Saturday afternoon they told the theater janitor, Oliver Richardson, they would be "back early Monday morning to finish the job."

They kept their word, Frederick added, describing how they went into the night deposit room and waited in the closet until the clerks came in.

Footprints Only Clew In $257,775 Gem Theft

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Footprints on a terrace were the only clew today to a burglar who stole $257,775 in cash and jewels in southern California's fifth big jewel robbery this month.

Oilman Thomas Winans and his wife lost a quarter of a million dollars worth of diamonds in the latest and largest of the jewel thefts at their secluded Bel-Air mansion.

The burglar apparently opened a terrace door with a passkey while they slept early yesterday and crept to the secret compartment where Mrs. Winans kept the jewels.

None of the gems was insured, police said Winans told them.

Diamond Dealer Robbed Of $55,000 in Gems

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Two men forced their way into a taxicab today, bludgeoned a diamond merchant with an iron pipe and escaped with $55,000 in diamonds.

Louis Steinberg, the diamond merchant, later was taken to Bellevue Hospital and treated for bruises.

LOOK, NO BEARD: James Mason's reached Hollywood and Barbara Bel Geddes for what Metro is calling the gent's "First American Kiss." It's for a film called "Caught" and, apart from the fact that Mason exchanged some lusty busses with his wife Pamela Kellino on the New York stage in a short-lived play about a heavily bearded King David, this seems to record what may be an epochal moment

Demaret Reverses Script, Beats Hogan by 3 Strokes

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

SELF-APPOINTED well-wishers of Joe Louis have been writing demands in the public prints that he quit before some youthful second-rater knocks him loose from the title he has held for most of 12 years.

POVICH

They want to be spared the sight, they say, of Louis being pummeled into defeat by some upstart lucky enougn to be in the same ring with an aging, fat, slow-moving relic of a once great champion.

They make out the case that Jersey Joe Walcott, older even than Louis, had him on the floor three times in his last two fights; that Louis was a fumbling, heavy-legged, groping and unchampion-like fighter in these last two years and that on May 12 he will be 35.

His only weapon now is his punching speed, it is pointed out with some correctness and that is no longer the darting thing of the early Louis. He doesn't chill 'em now with that left hook, until he has a hurt guy in front of him as he had Walcott last July.

THAT'S THE PICTURE they draw of the aging Louis and substantially it fits the subject, but as yet they can't name the party of the second part. The name of Ezzard Charles keeps cropping up, and sometimes Lee Savold is mentioned and that of Joey Maxim, but these are quick to be rejected in this corner.

Charlie is 26, and age-wise he fits into the story of Louis' ultimate conqueror, but he's a 176-pounder and somehow never did impress ringsiders with any championship destiny. He did stop big Joe Baksi in the Garden a few months back, but off that performance his championship stock sagged, you'd have to say.

Against big, slow-moving Baksi, slower even than the current Louis, Charles was taking a bad beating until he stabbed open a cut over Baksi's eye and won by a technical knockout.

And in the early rounds, Baksi all but caved Charles in with ponderous pelts to the stomach, and had he been in the ring with Louis that night they'd have lugged him out on the next punch thrown.

CERTAINLY THE REST of the current heavyweights are not the kind to cause Louis to hasten into retirement. Lee Savold, now being boomed as a challenger, wasn't even a first-rate sparring partner for Billy Conn, and his most recent showing was scarcely in his favor. He fouled out against Bruce Woodcock, the British heavyweight, whom nobody has dared to mention in the same inhalation with Louis.

The best boxer of the second-flight crop is Joey Maxim, the Cleveland heavyweight, but he can't bat his way out of a cellophane wrapper, and Louis isn't going to have any trouble with that kind. Jersey Joe Walcott, twice beaten by Louis, is apparently still the biggest threat to his title.

That Louise isn't moving well these days is apparent, even from his exhibition bouts. Jimmy Bivins cut him up in Cleveland, and the other night in Miami, Elmer Ray opened a gash over the champion's eye with big gloves.

MOST CERTAINLY Louis is going to be licked some day, but that day does not appear to be quickly at hand what with the challengers such as they are. And, if it is indeed true that Joe is in need of income to pay his taxes and finance his various enterprises, that revenue is at hand without too great a risk of losing his title.

Already he has a $500,000 offer to make a circus tour, and his exhibitions in the last two months have netted him more than $100,000. The big source of revenue to be tapped, however, is television, and as the coaxial cable creeps across the country Louis' managers are envisioning the biggest financial killing ever made in the prize ring.

They're not ready, yet, to tap it. They see no call for Louis even to make any defense of his title in 1949. There is some kind of a rule that supposedly compels a champion to defend his title every six months, but Louis has been such a fighting champ, that will easily be waived. No, 1950 is the year for Louis when, if he is licked, it will be at more profit, thanks to the demands he can make for the television receipts, than any champion ever knew.

For Mile-O'-Dimes

American Challenges Hoyas; Suggests City Title Series

"American University is willing to play Georgetown University or any other Washington college for the Mile-O'-Dimes and to make any reasonable concession in order to close the game."

That was the open challenge issued by Staff Cassell, athletic director at A. U., during yesterday's weekly Touchdown Club luncheon.

"We would donate our gymnasium and setup and do anything else in our power if Georgetown would agree to a game," Cassell said. "I am confident that Abe Rosenfield, Catholic University's coach, would welcome an opportunity to meet another Washington area team on the same bill."

It was the opening bid for a series involving all five of Washington's collegiate court teams. Cassell suggested an American U.-Georgetown, Catholic U.-Maryland double-header with George Washington coming in on a second twin bill to decide the city title. The Mile-O'-Dimes would benefit from the whole series.

Officials at both Georgetown and G. W. liked the idea of playing A. U. for the Mile-O'-Dimes, but at both schools the difficulty of squeezing in an extra game was brought out.

Georgetown's Coach Elmer Ripley said he was willing to play Cassell's Eagles but the matter of scheduling a game was out of his province. He suggested Cassell contact the faculty moderator of athletics.

At G. W., Publicist Johnny Busick thought an American game with either Catholic U. or Maryland, as the second half of a G. W.-Georgetown program, would make an excellent drawing card.

But for G. W. to card an extra game, with its schedule filled up to the Southern Conference tournament March 3-5, was though practically impossible by Busick.

"For such a good charity, however," Busick said, "I'm sure G. W. would make every effort to arrange a date.

Garshag Has 38 Points as Eagles Win

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Ronnie Garshag, a third-stringer in 1947, put on one of the most dazzling scoring sprees of the season last night, scoring 38 points as American University romped to a 75-41 victory over Bucknell at the A. U. gym.

Garshaw was unofficially credited with the District collegiate scoring record. The previous high was thought to be 35 points scored by A. U.'s Bart Fugler two years ago. Behind Garshag, Coach Staff Cassell's Eagles took their ninth victory in 14 games, administering Bucknell's ninth straight defeat.

Garshag started off with a hot hand in the first period and paced the Eagles to a 15-4 lead. He cooled off a little in the second period and Bucknell pulled within six points at the half, 29-23. From then on it was Garshag all the way until he was withdrawn with three minutes of the game left.

American led by 57-30 going into the final quarter. Johnny Wakefield wound up with 12 points. Bucknell was led by Johnny Mosny, also with 12 points.

Sampson's Goal Beats Virginia, 52-50

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—A field goal by Bill Sampson, Virginia Tech's sophomore center, in the last four seconds of play gave the Gobblers a 52-50 victory here tonight over the University of Virginia.

There were only 10 seconds remaining when Virginia's substitute guard, Frank Allen, whipped in a basket that tied the score, 50-50.

Coach Gus Tebell's visiting Cavaliers had led all the way except for a brief second at the start, when the score was tied 2-2, until the scoreboard clock had started to move around for the final minute.

Purdue Upends Illinois, 55-53

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 31 (AP).—Purdue's Boilermakers nursed a slender lead for nearly 25 minutes tonight and upended Illinois' Big Nine basketball leaders, 55-53, before 10,500 fans.

Illinois had won 11 straight games over all and 4 in the Big Nine.

Minnesota Wins

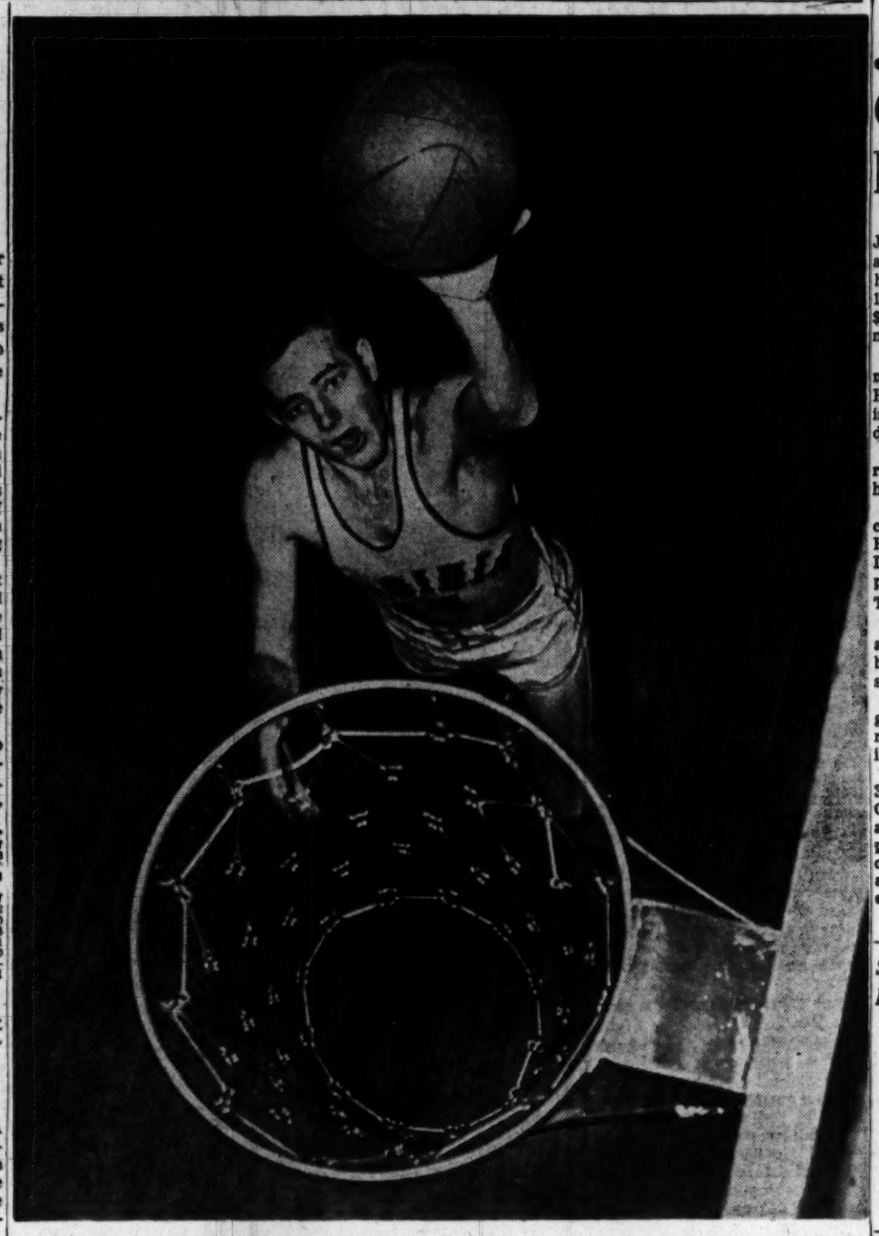
Minneapolis, Jan. 31 (AP).—Big Jim McIntyre tossed in 26 points as Minnesota defeated Northwestern, 61-40, in a Big Nine basketball game here tonight. The victory put the Gophers back into first place in the Big Ten with a record of six won and one lost.

Until tonight Illinois had led the league with a 4-0 record, Illinois lost to Purdue.

Celtics' Noszka Quits As Player, Now Scout

Boston, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Boston Celtics of the professional Basketball Association of America tonight announced the retirement of Stan Noszka, veteran guard, as a player and his appointment as their chief scout.

At the same time Coach Doggy Julian announced the outright release of Earl Shannon, former Providence Steamrollers player in 13 games.



AMONG NATION'S BEST—Joe Noertker, Virginia University center, is maintaining an average of 21 points per game to rank among the Nation's top scorers in collegiate basketball this season. He has scored 279 points in 13 games. Joe will lead his Cavaliers against George Washington Wednesday night in one game of an Armory doubleheader. Georgetown plays Princeton, current Ivy League pacesetter, in the other game

A Letter to the Editor

Princeton Grad Tells Hoyas They're in for Tough Game

Editor's Note: Townsend Evans, Princeton, '34, wrote a letter to The Washington Post about Princeton's basketball team. It is crammed with information about the Tigers who play Georgetown here Wednesday night. The letter follows:

I believe that Washington basketball fans will see one of the more colorful teams when Princeton faces Georgetown next Wednesday at the Armory.

The Tigers aren't one of the best quintets in the country yet they are on top of the Ivy League with a 3-0 record. And they will remain there until at least Saturday when they oppose Yale at New Haven.

The Elis, sparked by Tony Lavelli, have one of the better teams in the Nation and have defeated five out of six Ivy League teams to date. The victims of Princeton include Gettysburg, Lafayette, Miami, Pennsylvania, Navy, Harvard and Dartmouth. The Tigers have lost gaves to Villanova (as who hasn't?), Miami and Rutgers (twice).

Three football stars are important members of the Orange and Black court outfit. They are George Sella, Ed Reed and Cliff Kurrus.

Sella, a halfback, is captain-elect of the 1949 team which will face Navy at Baltimore next fall. Reed and Kurrus are both ends who did better than fair in 1948 in their introduction to varsity competition.

Sella, Reed and Kurrus, none of whom is old enough to vote, accounted for all of Princeton's touchdowns in the Tigers' 20-14 victory over Yale last fall. Over the season this trio scored a combined total of 12 touchdowns—Sella (5), Kurrus (4) and Reed (3).

George Sella has already established himself as one of the best athletes in the history of Princeton athletics. While at Cliffside Park High School, he was voted the best high school athlete in New Jersey. Although an outstanding performer in baseball and track, Sella has concentrated on football and basketball at Princeton.

In 1948 he made both the All-Ivy and All-Eastern football teams as a backfield man. He also was chosen to the Ivy League second team last season in basketball and tallied 238 points in 23 games throughout the season. As a basketball player, Sella is primarily a team player and ball handler.

As a football player, his talents are much along the same lines. Head Coach Charlie Caldwell had the following to say in reviewing the Tigers' 1948 season: "Sella's contributoins to the team were appropriately recognized with his eleyation to the All-Eastern and All-Ivy teams."

George was undoubtedly one of the country's outstanding football players in 1948. His blocking from wingback was as fully important as his ball carrying and his defensive play left little to be desired, once he recuperated from the bumps and bruises which nearly hobbled him in the first three starts of the season."

Cliff Kurrus, although only a sophomore, already has set two Princeton records. Last winter he scored 32 points against the Columbia Freshmen. And he was a member of three undefeated teams in football, basketball and track. He has done better than 23 feet in the broad jump. Kurrus is a 6-foot-4, 193-

Villanova Is Upset by Dukes

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—Duquesne University turned the Villanova Wildcats into very tame Tabbies tonight, downing them 65-37 before a crowd of 5625 in the Gardens.

It was Villanova's first loss of the season after 12 victories.

The taming of the Wildcats left the Pied Pipers of Hamline U. the only major undefeated college basketball team in the country.

Villanova Coach George Severance says he's not superstitious but maybe there were too many 13's piled up against him. He is in his thirteenth season at Villanova and it was the thirteenth game of the season both for Duquesne and Villanova.

Duquesne has lost two games abroad—to Yale and Bowling Green—but none on the home floor this season.

On Saturday night in Washington Villanova whipped Georgetown,, 64-49, for its 12th victory.

Jimmy Has 67; Match Even at 14th

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 31 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret squared playoff accounts with Ben Hogan today as he won a 3-stroke victory in an 18-hole special round to decide the $10,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

The colorful Ojai, Calif., shotmaker scored a 4 under par 67. Hogan took a 70. They had finished the 72-hole tourney yesterday tied at 278.

As he finished the round Demaret quipped, "I feel like a race horse beating Citation."

This was a reversal of the outcome last week when Demaret and Hogan ended deadlocked in the Long Beach Open. Hogan won that playoff 67-69.

Takes Lead on 14th

The winner broke a deadlock at the fourteenth hole with a birdie 3 and picked up additional strokes on the last two holes.

With his approaches hitting the green with deadly accuracy, Demaret brought a careful putting game into play.

A pair of putts between 25 and 30 feet helped the Demaret cause. One, on the fourth hole, gave him a two-stroke lead. Hogan three-putted the hole. The second came on the eighteenth, when Demaret already had virtually clinched the event.

It was the eleventh straight day of competitive golf for Demaret. He played in the pro-amateur meet here between the Long Beach playoff and the start of this tournament.

Although Demaret grabbed a four-stroke lead in the first six holes, Hogan squared things in the next six. They were even through 13.

Demaret's approach shot on the 345-yard fourteenth hole landed about 7 feet from the pin. Hogan was 12 feet away. The Hershey, Pa., sharpshooter missed the putt and Demaret, carefully lining up his shot, sent it dead to the cup for a birdie and the lead.

To the winner goes the $2000 top prize. Hogan gets $1400. The two also divide 50 per cent of the gate from the extra day's play. The crowd, estimated by host pro Willie Low at about 3000 persons, paid $1.50 each to see the play.

Both golfers commented the course was in better shape today than it had been during the regulation 72 holes.

The cards:

Sometimes It Doesn't Pay to Take a Bath

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., golf pro who won $52.50 prize money in the Phoenix Open, lost $1245 at the same time.

Revolta told police his wallet containing a $1200 cashier's check, another $30 check and $15 in cash disappeared while he was taking a steam bath after the tournament yesterday.

Brown Stays With Browns Through 1955

Cleveland, Jan. 31 (AP).—Paul Brown tonight announced he had cast his lot as football coach with the Cleveland Browns for another seven years by signing to extend his present contract as coach and general manager for five years through the 1955 season.

Brown described his new contract as "a continuation of the same terms." The terms of the original contract, signed in February, 1945, were for a salary of $25,000 plus 15 per cent of the All-America Football Confernce club's proceeds. That contract had two years to run.

The new contract spiked rumors that Brown would quit professional football to become a college coach. It also represented an expression of his confidence that despite the feuding between the AAFC and the older National League, the play-for-pay gridders would make a success of the two-league setup.

At a dinner party for sports reporters, Brown explained

"I have had a pleasant experience in professional football," he said. "The people I have been dealing with have been fair and good to me. Certainly this stage of development of things is no time for me to give it up. Knowing I am going to stay two more years means, I may as well go with it the route."

Arthur B. McBride, owner of the Conference champions of three years, had this to say:

"The league will continue, and professional football will continue as a two-league setup. I figure as long as we are in the business we might as well extend the contract. Neither of us will then have anything to worry about. I don't want to be out looking for a coach every year. You can get a lot of coaches, but you can't get a lot of coaches like this boy."

Louis Puts Dixie Oliver In Hospital

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis knocked out Dixie Lee Oliver, veteran Negro fighter from St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington, D. C., in the fourth round of their exhibition bout here tonight.

Oliver, who weighed 222 pounds, was out for more than 10 minutes and was carried from the ring on a stretcher. He was taken to a hospital for an examination. Louis felled Oliver with a left hook to the chin 1 minute and 30 seconds after the last round started. There was no padding under the canvas and Oliver's head struck the floor when he fell.

Louis, who weighed in at 221, was obviously concerned over Oliver's condition and did not leave the ring until the St. Petersburg fighter had been carried away. He said it was only the second fighter he had really hurt in his boxing career.

An estimated 5,200 persons saw the bout.

Louis had Oliver down for a nine count just before the end of the first round and toyed with him throughout the second and third round.

Fourteen-ounce gloves were used in the bout.

It was the first time at least on his current tour that the champ had knocked out an exhibition foe.

"I didn't hit him hard," the champion said. "It was a long left, not sharp."

Louis said it appeared to be the worst he hurt an opponent since 1934 when he rocked Art Sikes to sleep for a long spell.

'Fighting Janitor' During War Years

Dixie Oliver was quite an attraction in Washington during the war years. He won nine straight fights until Joe Baksi knocked him out in six rounds at Griffith Stadium in 1945.

Oliver was given a fancy build-up by Turner's Arena, where he fought most of his fights. He slept in the ring there and became known as the "Fighting Janitor."

Among the fighters beaten here by Oliver were Gus Dorazio, Johnny Dennison and Colion Chaney.

Stribling Gets Easy Verdict Over Hursey

Ken Stribling battered out a unanimous 10-round decision over Smuggy Hursey last night, but it's no credit to Stribling that he permitted the one-time local hot-shot to stay the distance.

Hursey, toast of the town two years ago, was a pathetic sight as he stumbled and groped around the Turner's Arena ring.

Gone were his punch and most important—his desire to fight. He was ready to be taken, but Stribling, try as he did all 10 rounds, couldn't do it.

Stribling brought Hursey out of his crouch with short left uppercuts and followed with chopping right hands which staggered Hursey numerous times

Hursey landed only a few effective blows. Many times he tried looping right hands but missed each shot by several feet.

Stribling, essaying a comeback himself, tired in the middle rounds, but the plodding Hursey couldn't do anything about it. Smuggy failed to win a round.

Bulldog Rutherford, 162, Roanoke, Va., defeated Dick Barber, Washington, in the opening five-rounder.

Walter Hamm, 148, Washington, scored a third round TKO over Jackie O'Keefe, Baltimore; Puggy Lyons, 144, Washington, decisioned Jimmy Briscoe, 147, Washington, and Jackie Ford, 147, Washington, won from Billy Cofield, 142, Washington, in another five.

Central Tests Wilson's Two-Platoon System at Armory Today

In Freak Accident

Rauber, Once Central High Great, Dies

A freakish accident yesterday ended the life of Comdr. L. J. (Ty) Rauber, U.S.N., former Central High athletic great, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Guam.

Rauber died of an apparent heart attack after falling overboard from a fishing boat, the wire service reported. Friends said he died as he was being pulled back aboard the craft.

Rauber was in charge of the land division of Guam's naval government. He was a brilliant quarterback and second-baseman for Central during the early 20s, later earning All-America mention for his grid play at Washington and Lee. While there he played on the team that also produced Eddie Cameron, Duke University athletic director.

Rauber came back to Central in 1930, taking over the football coaching reins for two years. At the same time he was taking a law degree at Georgetown and acting as player-coach of the sandlot Washington Apaches.

It was his play with the latter club, then a favorite on the local scene, that accounted for its first triumph over the rival Washington Mohawks before a crowd of 10,000 at Griffith Stadium.

After his brief coaching career Rauber went into the Department of Justice until his call to active Navy duty in 1939.

Surviving him is a son, L. J. Rauber, jr., a student at Georgetown Prep; his widow, Mrs. Carmen Rauber of San Francisco; two brothers, Benjamin T. Rauber of Montclair, N. J., and Walter Rauber of Chevy Chase; and three sisters, Mrs. Francis Norton and the Misses Margaret and Mary Rauber, all of 4330 43d st. nw., Washington.

Virginia Wins Close Fights

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31.—The University of Virginia opened its 1949 boxing season tonight with a 4½ to 3½ victory over South Carolina, the Southern Conference's boxing champions.

The Cavaliers, themselves defending the Eastern Intercollegiate title, got all their points by decisions. The only knockout of the evening was registered by the Gamecock's 165-pounder Harry Temple in a TKO over Jack Marks, Virginia, at 1:15 of the third round.

Allen Hollingsworth, Virginia's 130-pound EIL titlist from Alexandria, Va., punched out a decision over Joe Stringer.

125 POUNDS—Pete Compassi (SC) decisioned Leonard Coiner.
130 POUNDS—Allen Hollingsworth (V) decisioned Joe Stringer.

Western, Tech Play In Opener

The newest gimmick in basketball tactics will have a thorough trial this afternoon when Central High has a go at Wilson's two-platoon system in the second game of an Interhigh doubleheader at the Armory.

Up to now, the tactic has been unbeatable, but it hasn't yet been challenged by a team of Central's caliber.

It was a combination of luck and Coach Hank Bristor's inspiration that produced the two-platoon system at Wilson. Bristor, coaching his first year of high basketball, found he had five good men who could shoot pretty fair.

He also found five other good men who, while there were no Mikans among them, could control the ball and keep the opposition impotent. Bristor put five and five together and got four straight Interhigh victories.

The way it works out, the spoilers wait around until Leo Speros and Jim Young and their buddies get tired running up a score. Then Lynn Felt and Rommy Linney lead the spoilers into action for the dilatory tactics while the offensive unit gets its breath.

Against Central, which has a 4-1 Interhigh record and would like nothing better than to bounce Wilson into third place today, there's the danger of the Vikings running up a score first and permanently.

There's the not-so-small matter of stopping Jimmy Pantos with his 87 points in five games. And there's also Long Island's gift package to Viking Coach Gabe Ferazzi, Lou Glickfield, who became eligible yesterday.

In the opener, starting at 3:30, Tech and Western will meet to break their fifth-place tie. Both have won two and lost two.

Hoya JV Wins Eighth, 50-44, From American

Georgetown's Jay Vees last night nosed out American U. 50-44 on the losers' court. It was Georgetown's eighth win in nine starts.

How Do Our Treatments Help Grow Thicker Hair?
Hair Experts' science-based treatments actually parallel Nature's own hair-growing process. They scientifically stimulate and "feed" starved elements, penetrating to the actual hair-growing "factory" that is innate in every scalp, and then strengthen the weak forces that are thwarting Nature's own dynamic urge to grow healthy, vigorous hair.
In these chemo-therapeutic treatments, Hair Experts exclusively use ultraviolet therapy, special, penetrating Vigo-Liquids (created in our own laboratory), and intensive stimulating and professional massage, all scientifically timed and combined to energize the scalp to health and vitality.

DELAY IS DEADLY!
Don't dare to delay! Once you notice symptoms of excessive oiliness or dryness, an itchy scalp, excessive hair in the combings, act immediately before fatal follicle shrinkage ruins all hopes of hair-enjoyment. Hair Experts' EFFECTIVE treatments are extremely pleasant and relaxing—and yet invigorating. They'll help you to noticeably healthier scalp and better hair within 30 days, and we'll teach you PROFESSIONALLY how to maintain it for a lifetime. Treatments taken in time save hair—save money. Motorboat Racing Bug Bit Champ

Palmer, Newcomer To Rough Sport Amazes Oldtimers

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

NATURALLY, Superman of comic strip fame doesn't have a counterpart in real life. However, once in a while a guy pops up who can do something in sports better than his fellow man. Then we have a Babe Ruth, a Bobby Jones or a Joe Louis.

Haight

There must be a dash of Superman in the makeup of Joe Palmer, Washington-ian and current motorboat racing sensation. How else can we account for a fellow who never steered a power boat or even saw a race until 1946, becoming the toast of the East as a driver in one of the most hazardous of sports?

In New York recently, the stocky Palmer stepped up before the motorboat racing greats was presented with the Gordon—Guy Lombardo et al—and Munce Trophy as outstanding driver of 1948, plus a certificate to the Gulf Hall of Fame, the tops in awards for the sport.

Men who have spent the greater part of their lives tinkering with engines and cutting through the surf are still trying to make some sense out of the rapid rise of this daring fellow.

For 36 years Palmer led a normal life.

Admittedly, he's a "wharf rat," a label given Southwest Washington youngsters who spent a good part of their boyhood in the nearby channel.

Young Joe could yell "Fr-r-esh f-f-ish!" louder than the other kids and earned some of his first pocket money helping a neighborhood fish peddler.

PALMER FOUND time to play baseball in The Washington Post's Capital City Leagues and was good enough for a minor league trial with big league scouts eyeing him.

However, he finally returned to his native Southwest and it wasn't long before he owned his seafood business. Aside from being a twice-a-week league bowler with a moderate average, Joe believed his sports days were behind him.

ALTHOUGH HIS place of business is within sight of the President's Cup races, Joe never took the trouble to see even one heat. In fact, he laughs now about complaining of the noise made by boats tuning up at nearby moorings.

In 1946 a friend bought a class D service runabout. Joe tried a turn at steering and he was talked into driving the boat in a Washington race.

If there is such a thing as a motorboat bug, it certainly bit Joe Palmer good and deep. He finished third in a field of 17 that day and thought he should have won.

With this lone race under his belt, Palmer was up to his neck in plans for a racing boat of his own. During the winter he had a hull built and with the aid of a friend, Johnny Zeverley, installed a Ford motor.

With the boat shipshape, Joe couldn't wait for nearby 1947 competition. Putting his craft on a trailer he hauled it to Florida to try his luck with the big time 1.35 class drivers. Three times he made the 2000-mile trip, only to run into a string of reveres. If the boat held together, the motor didn't, he said.

When the motor blew a gasket, an ordinary Johnny-come-lately probably would have blown his top, but not Joe Palmer. He probably said, "Wait until I get those Frolida guys in my territory, I'll show them."

At any rate, he showed them.

At Solomons Island, shot his boat over the starting line to take lead and, in race track parlance, "he never looked back," setting his own pace and winning far out in front.

From that moment, Palmer was an important factor in every race in his class in the East. Displaying skill, courage, stubbornness and spirit, he churned the straightaways and rocked the buoys to run up 15 victories in in 21 starts before cold weather set in.

JOE PALMER SHOWS TROPHY TO MARION RUBIN

Last winter, Palmer decided he was ripe for the big time—the hydroplane class. So he purchased Morlan Visel's famous Hurricane which he promptly renamed Tommy Boy after his youngest son.

In addition to a new boat, Palmer also took a new pastner—Bill Worthington, a Washington boy who raced the old 1.51's in the early days and who was an expert motor mechanic.

Joe and Bill went to work on the new Tommy Boy, anxious to start the 1948 season in Florida. They smiled when Palmer lined up with some of the Nation's top drivers and boats at Mount Dora.

In opposition was Pops Cooper and his Blue Blazes which had just set a record of 88 miles an hour on the straightaway; Sid's Ace, formerly the Yankee Doodle, biggest point winner of 1947 and others.

But Palmer had the last laugh. He won both 5-mile heats and then went on to win six of his eight starts in the Sunshine State. He then moved north, opened the season here with his smashing victories in the National Capital Regatta, swept things at Red Bank, N. J. including the National Sweepstakes.

Victories came thick and fast and all the while Worthington was performing mechanical miracles with an engine supposed to have a life of only 10 races.

Back here for the President's Cup, Joe won his first heat but a broken crankshaft forced him out of action the next day.

Came the end of the season and Palmer had won 48 of 51 starts.

I tried to find something in Joe Palmer's background to account for his speed urge. He admitted driving an auto and I asked, "Ever been arrested for speeding?"

He shook his head, thought a while and then said, "Come to think of it, I was arrested for speeding. I've been around this Washington Channel all my life, but darned if I knew it was against the law to drive a boat through here at more than six miles an hour."

Skins Land Szafaryn of N. C., First 3 Draft Choices in Fold

The Redskins became the first team in pro football history to sign all of their first three draft choices yesterday when Len Szafaryn, University of North Carolina tackle, came to terms for the '49 season.

Szafaryn, chosen No. 3 by the 'Skins, joins Halfback Bob Goode of Texas A. & M. and Tackle Lauri Neimi of Washington State on the local roster. Eight rookies and five veterans have now been signed.

The latest addition is just 21 and can be expected to add weight to his present 215-pound, 6 foot-2½ frame. During his four years at North Carolina he earned All-State, All-Southern Conference and All-South honors. He was picked on Grantland Rice's All-America second team after his second appearance in the Sugar Bowl.

Shires Charge Reduced

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 31 K.—A charge of murder against Art Shires, former major league baseball player, was reduced to one of aggravated asault by the Dallas County grand jury today.

Shires had been charged with murder in the death of Hi Erwin, another former masebaII player, in a Dallas hospital last December 4. Erwin was said to have had a fight with Shires on October 3.

Dr. E. E. Muirhead testified at an examining trial that an autopsy showed the cause of death was a combination of cirrhosis of the liver and bronchial pneumonia.

Army Boxers Mix Tonight At Ft. Myer

Final weighins were held at various Army units yesterday for the 60 soldiers who'll open the Military District of Washington boxing tournament tonight at the Fort Myer gym.

The tournament will run through Thursday night and Col. James V. Cole has thrown his Fort Myer gym open to the public for the three nights. No admission will be charged for any of the 5000 available seats.

Successful combatants in the MDW tourney will represent the local forces in the All-Army tournament which will also be staged at Fort Myer beginning February 21.

Considered most likely to succeed are Eliot Powers, Andy Nathan, and Eddie Brazerol, all defending MDW champions.

Powers is the hard-hitting lightweight from Fort Belvoir who recently won the Golden Gloves 175-pound title and who'll represent Washington later in the Gloves' regional eliminations. Nathan is a welterweight and Brazerol is a lightweight. Both are from Fort Myer.

Widdoes Will Coach Ohio U.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—Carroll C. Widdoes, best-record coach in Ohio State University football history, will take over March 1 as grid mentor of the Ohio U. Bobcats at Athens, Ohio.

Widdoes' departure from Ohio State takes from that university the last of the staff which accompanied Paul Brown there from Massillon High School in 1941.

The soft-spoken, gentlemanly Widdoes, backfield coach under Brown for three years at Ohio State, took over the head job in 1944 when Brown entered the Navy. He led the Bucks to their first unbeaten-untied season since the late 'teens, and was named "Coach of the Year."

That year he won nine in a row with a group of freshmen and 4-F players, and the following season he grabbed seven of nine.

Princeton—From P. 17

Princeton Grad Warns Hoyas

pounder who hails from Springfield High School, Illinois.

Another tall member, and an important one, of the Tiger team is Center Bernie Adams who is president of the junior class. Adams has thus far rated ahead of Kurrus at the jump position. Last year he made the second All-Ivy team at center behind Walt Budko of Columbia and now of the Baltimore Bullets.

Adams was the star of Princeton's upset victory over Columbia in 1948 which was the only game Columbia lost during its regular schedule. This season Adams has been Princeton's best scorer.

Last year he tallied 164 points in Ivy-League competition to tie Herb Lyon of Pennsylvania, also a center, for fifth place behind Lavelli (Yale), Budko (Columbia), Campbell (Darmouth) and Gale (Cornell).

There is only one senior among the Princeton regulars—Bill Kelly who is all of 23 years old. Joe Holman, the captain, is a junior.

When he wasn't Princeton lost to Brown, Rutgers, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth. He was the key man in football just as in basketball.

Aafter watching Sella perform as a sophomore, a former Princeton All-Ivy League selection some 15 years ago said: "Sella has only one weakness as a basketball player. He plays too hard and paces himself like a racehorse. Outside of that, he does everything right."

Very truly yours,
TOWNSEND EVANS,

KENTUCKY'S KEY TO HOSPITALITY

One key only fits the door of a gracious Kentucky home. Within—one native bourbon, keyed to hospitality, is most often poured. That's OLD FITZGERALD, Kentucky's Key Bourbon, naturally distilled and patiently aged on one genuine sour mash formula for three generations.

Sportsmen's Indoor Show Opens March

Washington's second annual Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show will be held March 5-13 in National Guard Armory, it was announced last night by Show Manager Leo J. Paulin.

Hundreds of exhibits of the latest equipment used in competitive sports and other out-of-doors recreational pursuits will share spectator attention with a 12-act tank and stage presentation featuring the Nation's experts in various pastimes.

Following the general pattern of the 1948 show which was enthusiastically received by Washingtonians, the forthcoming show will consist of four major divisions of exhibits — sporting goods, boats, automobiles and trailercoaches.

The animated portion will feature girl swimmers, casting, archery, firearms, table tennis and canoe-tilting stars, among others.

On the humorous side will appear a talking crow and a singing bear, the latter well known to movie-goers as "Rosie" of Beebe's Hollywood Bears. The water acts will be seen in a 70-by-35-foot tank.

The show, as before, is sponsored by the League of Maryland Sportsmen, an organization of 9000 Maryland and District of Columbia outdoorsmen who are members of 85 affiliated rod and reel clubs.

Glenn L. Martin, noted aviation designer and manufacturer, is president of the league whose income from the show is devoted to game, fish, forestry and soil conservation.

A Washington show committee cooperating with Manager Paulin includes A. Lee Amoss, treasurer of the league; Michael Hudoba, local editor of the publication Sports Afield; Fred Orsinger, former director of the Commerce Department Fish and Wildlife Aquarium; and Shelton Reynolds, regional director of L.M.S.

Court Upholds Conviction in Murder Case

The Supreme Court by a 5-to-4 vote yesterday upheld the murder conviction of a Negro who charged Negroes were not fairly represented on Baltimore grand juries.

Without an opinion, the Supreme Court affirmed the first degree murder conviction of Sam Zimmerman of Baltimore. The Baltimore grand jury which indicted him on September 5, 1946, included 22 white persons and one Negro.

Rehearing Refused

In another decision, the high court refused to rehear a case in which it had previously ruled trial juries in the District can be composed entirely of Federal employes.

Rehearing had been requested by counsel for Robert Frazier, convicted of violating the Harrison Narcotics Act. The Supreme Court stood by its 5-to-4 decision last month that there is no denial of impartial trial by jury because a properly impanelled jury happens to represent but one element of the community.

In the Baltimore case, lawyers for the convicted murderer claimed that from 1910 to and including the grand jury for the May term of 1946, "there has served on every grand jury no more and no less than one Negro with two exceptions in 1945." Two Negroes served on each of two grand juries in 1945, according to lawyers for Zimmerman who was indicted by the May term grand jury of 1946.

Procedure Improved

Hall Hammond, attorney general of Maryland, replied that the judges of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore took steps to improve the method of selecting grand jurors in 1944. One step taken, Hammond said, was to remove distinguishing marks after names of Negroes listed as prospective jurors.

Three Negroes were selected to serve on the grand jury which indicted Zimmerman but two were excused at their own request, Hammond said.

Dunbar Beats Phelps, 63-55

Dunbar of Baltimore yesterday defeated Phelps, 63-55, on Armstrong High's court. Rebert Langley paced the winners with 13 points for their sixth win.

Phelps fought hard in the second half and pulled up within one point of Dunbar at 53-52 with only two and a half minutes left to play. Dunbar sank three baskets to win the game.

McGraw-Hill Surveys BUSINESS NEEDS

Permission is freely extended to companies, associations, or individuals to quote from or reprint all or parts of these editorial messages, with or without credit mention.

This is the 72nd of a series.

If it can get the money American industry in 1949 will go full steam ahead with a vitally-needed program of improving its facilities. This program since V-J Day has kept business expanding and has made belated headway in modernizing industry.

Furthermore, if it can get the money American industry will carry on for the next five years with its unprecedented program of expenditure for new plant and equipment. Plans already made call for spending about $55 billion.

These are findings of the McGraw-Hill national survey of "Business' Needs for New Plants and Equipment." Major results of the survey, which have been rechecked since election day, are summarized in the center of the page. They report what American industry is now planning to spend for new plant and equipment. They do not and cannot show what will be done if the plans are hamstrung by political action.

In 1949, the survey shows, American industry plans to spend $14.1 billion for new plants and equipment. That is only about 5% less than was actually spent in 1948.

If these plans are carried out, actual capital expenditures this year may be somewhat larger than they were in 1948. That is because expenditures usually prove to be larger than planned.

Fulfillment of American industry's plans for investment in new plant and equipment this year would no doubt mean a continuation of general prosperity. The record shows that when capital expenditures are high general business thrives.

Even more remarkable than the 1949 prospect is the fact that:

Industry already plans to spend $41 billion in the years 1950-53 to improve its plants and equipment.

Plans tend to taper off, of course, as they are pushed further into the uncertain future, five years from now. But the striking fact is that plans for expenditures so far ahead are as great as they are. They show American industry's need for tremendous improvements in its plants and equipment.

Again, let there be no mistake. These survey findings are not a five-year forecast. They report what leading corporations now are planning to do—if they can get the money.

But—won't industry be top-heavy with plants and equipment if it carries through any such program?

The answer is clearly—"No".

Here are some of the reasons why not that were disclosed by the McGraw-Hill survey:

First, manufacturing industries are shifting emphasis from expansion to improving efficiency.

They have increased their total capacity 56% since 1939. Their expenditures in 1948 went almost 50-50 for expansion and improvement. But in the next five years they plan to spend three-quarters of their funds to replace and modernize facilities, only one-quarter for expansion.

Second, the prospective rate of expenditure for new plant and equipment is relatively low.

Planned expenditures for new plant and equipment in 1949 represent about 7.5% of the present value of all plant and equipment. That rate of capital expenditure is no higher than the rate during previous periods of prosperity. And industry must overcome years of starvation for new equipment, caused first by the depression of the 30's, then by diversion to war production.

Third, industry is following an extremely cautious policy in buying new equipment.

Three out of four companies report that they will not buy equipment unless it will pay for itself within five years. And a third of the companies report that they expect new equipment to pay for itself within three years. The reason most frequently given for such expectations was that all the money available can be spent on equipment which does pay for itself quickly.

The program of capital expenditure planned by American industry is one of the greatest bargains ever offered to the American people.

To pay for itself in a few years, as equipment must if most companies are to consider buying it, that equipment must promise to produce much better products or make great savings in labor and material. The savings go first to the companies buying the equipment but, as they always have, they soon spread to everyone in the form of better products at lower costs.

Where does industry expect to get the money to buy this bargain for the American people?

Most of the companies covered by the McGraw-Hill survey (76% of the total) count on their own resources—largely profits—to pay for new plant and equipment. About 15% of them expect to borrow money, although only 4% like the idea of getting saddled with fixed debt. Only 9% of the companies expect to sell stock to investors, although twice that many report they wish they could.

What are the chances that business can get the money?

The survey provides no answer to that question. No survey can.

The answer will come from Washington—in what Congress does about taxes on profits and taxes on the millions of Americans who might invest a part of their income in industry's new plants and equipment.

The answer will be found also in the energy and skill shown by investment bankers, particularly in mobilizing the resources of the millions of Americans whose incomes have increased enough since 1940 to make them potential direct investors in industry.

Still another important part of the answer will be given by labor leaders. About half the companies surveyed by McGraw-Hill are holding back on new construction—primarily because of high costs. What organized labor does about wages and productivity can swell or shrink that percentage.

The McGraw-Hill survey leaves no doubt that American industry is fulfilling its responsibility. It is planning the capital improvements needed to make the nation secure, prosperous, and progressive.

But business today lacks confidence and badly needs added incentives. Proper taxation and increased depreciation allowances are vital if we are to open the capital markets to finance industry.

What will happen now depends in large part on what is done in Washington. In his State of the Union message, the President said that "business should plan for steady, vigorous expansion." But in his budget message he proposed new taxes which would divert a substantial share of the money industry is using for expansion and improvement. Moreover, he said nothing about the vital issues now freezing the capital markets.

It is not possible to have it both ways. Fulfillment of the President's tax program means cuting industry's program for new and better equipment. It means slowing down industrial progress. It means delaying the advance toward much higher standards of living tomorrow in order to have a little more government spending today.

I urge you to see that your Representative and your Senator have all the facts on industry's needs for new plant and equipment. What they do to this program will have a decisive bearing on the nation's security and welfare.

James H. McGraw, Jr.

President, McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, Inc.

WHAT THE SURVEY SHOWS

● HERE ARE THE MAJOR FINDINGS of McGraw-Hill's survey of "Business' Needs for New Plants and Equipment". Rechecked since Election Day, results show what industry is now planning to spend for new plants and equipment. They do not forecast what will actually be spent.

The survey shows:

1. Industry now plans to spend $14.1 billion in 1949—and almost $41 billion in the four years beyond, 1950-53.
2. Manufacturing industries alone plan to spend $7.2 billion in 1949. This is 7.5% of the estimated value—$96 billion—of all manufacturing facilities.
3. Manufacturers estimate conservatively that it would cost $136 billion to completely replace their facilities with the most modern plants and equipment available.
4. Postwar expansion is virtually complete in most manufacturing lines. Major exceptions: steel and petroleum refining.
5. Expansion programs of railroads, utilities, and oil companies still have two to five years to run.
6. Manufacturing industries have increased their capacity 56% since 1939. But expansion is slowing down. Increase planned in the next five years is only 13%.
7. Efficiency is emphasized more and more in planning new facilities. Manufacturers plan to devote almost three-quarters of their funds to replace and modernize. In 1948, 58% went to increase efficiency this way.
8. Equipment should pay for itself in five years or less, say three out of four manufacturing companies. New buildings, say 77% of them, should pay out in 15 years or less.
9. Profits and reserves are counted on to pay for new buildings and equipment by three out of four manufacturing companies. Some 15% expect to borrow, only 9% plan to sell stock. However, 20% would like to sell stock, only 4% want to borrow.
10. More liberal depreciation allowances for income tax purposes would prompt almost two-thirds of the companies to speed their purchase of new plants and equipment.

VA Office Shakeup To Cost 2500 Jobs, And Save 10 Million

VA: A major streamlining of the Veterans' Administration will place additional administrative duties on its headquarters staff here and also in its regional offices, one of which is here.

Administrator Carl R. Gray yesterday announced that effective immediately the 13 branch offices would be stripped of supervisory duties. Hereafter, all regional offices and hospitals will report direct to headquarters here instead of to the branch offices.

The branch offices, Gray said, would be renamed district offices and be limited to the handling of insurance and death claims.

Gray estimated the administrative alignment would save about 10 million dollars annually and wipe out about 2500 supervisory jobs in the branch offices. Some of the better branch supervisors will be offered transfers to the regional offices and to headquarters. VA offices here will have a few more jobs as a result of the shakeup.

The administrator emphasized that no employes will be laid off immediately. He said the reductions will be made gradually between now and July 1. In a letter to branch managers, Gray said:

"While the organization change will involve some personnel adjustment, I sincerely hope that we will be able to retain our more valuable people in the VA."

Gray said the revamping was aimed toward increased efficiency, to make possible better use of personnel, and to knock out overlapping responsibilities. He ordered the change after a seven-month inspection tour of VA activities.

However, Gray was forced to scale down the branch offices because of deep slashes in the President's 1950 budget for VA which would wipe out about 10,000 jobs in his agency. The budget specified that a big cut should be made in the branches.

The 1950 budget proposes a cut of about 850 VA jobs here which may be reduced somewhat by the transfer of additional administrative work such as personnel, loyalty investigations, etc., to headquarters.

The nearest branch office is in Richmond and the regional office here operated under its direction. A VA official estimated the Richmond office eventually would lose at least a couple of hundred employes.

BERNARD TASSLER has solid labor support to be Undersecretary of Labor. He's editor of the AFL's American Federationist and he went down the line for the reelection of President Truman. He was a New York newspaper man before he went to work for the AFL about 10 years ago.

JAMES R. WATSON is the new executive director of the National Civil Service League. He succeeds Eliot Kaplan who resigned to become deputy comptroller of New York State.

Watson resigned as professor of political science at Western Reserve University to take the important post. Before that, he served in the New York State government, and with the National Labor Relations Board and the old War Labor Board.

GEORGE RILEY is a good bet to be appointed to an important new post by the American Federation of Labor. An announcement of his appointment may come at the meeting of the AFL executive council in Miami. Riley is on the professional staff of the Senate Civil Service Committee.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service is about ready to announce an exam for social science jobs such as historian, foreign affairs officer, social science analyst and intelligence specialist. The jobs pay from $3727 to $6235. About 300 appointments will be made to vacancies in this city . . . It will be at least three weeks before Civil Service sets up an eligible list on the miscellaneous office machine exam which was given last October 30 . . . Those who wish to be considered immediately for substitute clerk and carrier jobs in the city postoffice should get in their applications with Civil Service before the end of this week.

An exam for meteorological aide jobs will be announced soon. The job pays from $2498 to $3727 to start. The openings are mainly in the Weather Bureau . . . An exam for guard jobs ($2350 to $3225 to start) is open at the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md. The guard jobs are limited to veterans only . . . A test for illustrator jobs is open at the Bolling Air Force Base here. The jobs pay from $2724 to $3351 to start.

SLAM-BANG: Representative Ed H. Rees (R., Kans.) threw the book at the Civil Service Commission and the merit system it operates in an article in this month's American magazine.

He accused department heads of having developed a personal-patronage plan which has scuttled the merit system and has cheated veterans out of jobs. He said duplication in the personnel field was costing the taxpayers about 25 million dollars a year.

Rees said this was the advice usually given Federal workers:

"Once you are in, work fairly hard, play politics, shift from office to office until you find a boss who likes you and your work—a boss who will take care of you. Stick with him and you will prosper as a career employe and eventually retire on nice pay. Don't worry about Civil Service rules. Your boss will outwit the commission."

D. C. Man Hurt As Truck Hits Car in Lanham

Driver Held on Charge of Hit-Run, Says He Didn't Know of Crash

A District man suffered a possible fractured skull yesterday afternoon in Lanham, Md., when his car overturned after being struck, police said, by a hit-and-run truck.

He is Paul V. Corcoran, 42, 1458 Columbia rd. nw. He was listed in undetermined condition at Prince Georges County General Hospital last night.

Police apprehended the driver of the truck about 4 miles from the scene of the accident at the Bladensburg Peace Cross. He was booked as Arthur R. Alexander, 31, of 422 Pendleton st., Alexandria. Police charged him with failure to stop after an accident and reckless driving by colliding.

The accident occurred, according to police, when Alexander's trailer-truck moved to the center of U. S. Route 50 in Lanham as Corcoran's car was passing it. Alexander told police he was unaware of the accident and continued on his way.

Two other passengers in Corcoran's car were uninjured. Alexander was released in $600 bond for hearing Monday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Editors Ruled Public Figures, Open to Criticism

A newspaper editor is a public figure and can be criticized in the press on grounds of fair comment, District Court Judge Matthew F. McGuire ruled yesterday in dismissing a libel suit against the Washington Daily News by Prescott Dennett, former editor of the Northeast Guide.

Judge McGuire also ruled in the $100,000 suit that there was no proof of actual malice and that the article in question, as a whole, did not give the impression that Dennett was a "Communist."

Dennett contended the News libeled him in September 1946 in an article which stated he was responsible for articles critical of Capital Transit and which quoted an unnamed CT official as saying Dennett was a "Communist."

Holdup Deaths

Man Indicted On 2 Counts Of Murder

Joseph W. Hunter, 27, was indicted yesterday for first degree murder in the fatal shooting of two men during a holdup of a moving picture theater October 30 in Southwest Washington.

The District grand jury charged Hunter, who lives at 1247 Union st. sw., with two counts of first-degree murder. He was charged with deadly assault in the wounding of three persons as he ran from the scene of the robbery, firing at his pursuers.

Hunter is held without bond at District Jail pending trial.

In another indictment, two men were charged with grand larceny of $3007.50 after reporting a false story of a holdup. They are Robert M. Garsh, 23, 2508 S. 9th st., Arlington, and Roscoe Perry, 28, 1924 12th st. nw.

According to police, Garsch, an employe of a Giant Food Shopping Center, reported a holdup, but later admitted the tale was untrue, and implicated Perry.

Maurice P. Holsinger, 42, a former Mount Rainier, Md., jeweler, was indicted for allegedly concocting a mail fraud scheme through the use of a loney-hearts organization known as the American Social Club of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

According to the indictment, three of his victims were Sara DeHart, 40, of 2500 13th st. nw.; Mrs. S. Bircks, a Philadelphia divorcee, and Margaret Linney, of Johnson City, Tenn.

Police stated the women charged Holsinger mulcted them of $8500. They said Holsinger proposed marriage, and falsely stated he had a $25,000 income and $150,000 in property.

Charged with first-degree murder in the pistol slaying of William Green, 35, of 654 Morton st. nw., was Miss Alice L. Logan, 22, of 727 Quebec st. nw.

Holdup Man Takes $250 At Grocery

Naiman

Sampson Naiman, who operates a store at 1501 1st st. nw., told police a light-skinned Negro entered his store about 8:45 p. m. as he and his nephew, Alvin Szojchet were closing the shop.

The man had a small pistol in his hand, Naiman told police, and said, "This is a stick up—I wan your money." While Naiman and his nephew complied, the man emptied the cash register of the day's heavy end-of-the-month receipts and fled.

Naiman said he foiled a would-be robber last year by chasing the man from the store with a meat cleaver. That man had no gun in his hand. This one did.

Naiman's store is only a block from the store of Groceryman Meyer Meyrovitch who was robbed and killed early last year.

School Aid 'Freeze' Charged by Fairfax

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

While Virginia school authorities clamor for funds, the State has a "kitty" of $84,800,000 "laid away somewhere . . . gathering moss," a spokesman for the Fairfax School Emergency Committee charged last night.

The statement was made by W. Alvord Sherman before 60 members of the Arlington P-TA Council in the Walter Reed School. Sherman is chairman of a special FSEC subcommittee studying school financing.

But Virginia State Senator Charles R. Fenwick, another speaker, denied that the 84 million dollars is just lying around, untouched.

The funds, he said, "are not unwanted surplus at all—they're all appropriated."

Sherman and his subcommittee are accusing the State of accumulating the "unused money" by "a slick legislative trick."

Except for a general fund surplus of $5,300,000, Sherman said, the entire amount has accumulated in a special fund for "capital outlay" at a rate of 11 million dollars per year "since 1942."

The "capital outlay" fund, Sherman said, is intended for the improvement and construction of institutions—hospitals, prisons, colleges.

But, he said, much of the money had been appropriated and reappropriated since 1942 with "no evidence that it is the intent of either the Legislature or the Governor actually to make these capital expenditures during the current biennium."

In 1948, the Virginia General Assembly made up this fund by (1) reappropriating 34 million dollars appropriated in earlier sessions for the capital outlay fund, (2) appropriated $23,200,000 in new funds, and (3) conditionally earmarked $22,100,000.

To this 1948 total of $79,500,000 the subcommittee added the present $5,300,000 general fund surplus to get its total of $84,800,000 it says is available for school spending.

State School districts recently estimated that Virginia will need roughly $396,000,000 for school construction within the next 10 years to put its educational system in first-class order.

In the breakdown, Fairfax County asked $19,000,000 for the decade; Arlington County estimated $11,000,000 needed for the next five years, and Alexandria City about $1,000,000 for the next ten.

Senator Fenwick said he was "100 per cent for more money for schools," but he said it would have to be taken from surplus—"not appropriated funds like the capital outlay fund."

"I think if you look at the appropriations (in that fund)," the senator said, "you'll find that practically all are covering essential needs."

In addition, Sherman told the P-TA Council, the 1948-50 biennium will produce a surplus of $42,100,000 more—$10,200,000 from excess of revenue over operating appropriation for 1949, and a surplus of $31,900,000 for 1950.

To this figure, Senator Fenwick last night added an estimated 12 million dollars additional revenue from new State taxes to go into effect this year.

Jones Retires As Executive of Pullman Firm

William S. Jones, 65, superintendent of the Washington district of the Pullman Co., retired yesterday after 40 years' service with the company.

Jones

Mr. Jones, who began his career as a Pullman conductor for the company in 1910 in Richmond, Va., handled the arrangements for special Pullman trains for both Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, and it was his task to provide the funeral train that brought President Roosevelt's body home from Warm Springs, Ga. His last major duties included the "Pullman City" accommodations that housed more than 5000 visitors here for President Truman's inaugural ceremonies.

Fellow employes held a farewell ceremony for him yesterday at the Pullman Co. offices at Union Station, where they presented him a television set.

A native of Virginia, he lives at 506 Elm st., Alexandria, is married and has two daughters.

Five Members Defend House As Industrious and Sober

House members yesterday defended their group record as being one of hard work and sobriety.

Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.) said in a speech to the House that he feared recent news stories about the way Washington cocktail parties interfere with public business might reflect on the hardworking members of Congress.

Congressmen, said Keefe, "have the ability to withstand the invitations of these society climbers who would have the members of Congress attend cocktail parties every day."

Keefe advised those who complain about cocktail parties to say "no" to the invitations and to quit drinking cocktails if it interferses with public business.

Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) majority leader of the House, said he agreed with Keefe. He said "members of Congress are a very hardworking group. We do not want to be proud of it. It's our duty. This is an 18-hour day job for any of us. The great majority of both bodies are devoted to the job of representing their people and doing their duty."

Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) declared that outside of religious bodies the Congress "is the soberest body of men on earth."

Representative Robert Rich (R., Pa.) said he had attended parties but had not had a drink yet. Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) advised the House he had no problem—he didn't get invitations to the cocktail parties.

By Urban League

Negro Status Here Called Top Problem

The so-called "Negro problem" was described yesterday as "the paramount unmet social problem in Washington" in the annual report of the Washington Urban League.

The report, presented to the league's directors by its president, Dr. Vincent J. Browne, at a luncheon meeting in the Cimmaron Club, cited the social needs of the Negroes of the community, and told of the organization's efforts to fill the need.

"Statistics on the city's poverty, crime, disease and dependency," says the report, prepared by Charles C. Beckett, executive secretary, "indicate that the Negro population contributes disproportionately to each of these categories."

Statistical Breakdown

The Negro, 24 per cent of the population, according to the report, accounts for:

Disease: 67 per cent of the city's tuberculosis deaths; 71 per cent of recorded syphilitic deaths.

Crime: 73.5 per cent of juvenile delinquency cases, 70.3 per cent of the felonies, 55.2 per cent of the misdemeanors and 22.4 per cent of all traffic violations.

Dependency and poverty: 60.2 per cent of those receiving old age assistance, 78.7 percent of those receiving aid for the blind, 85 per cent (estimated) of those receiving general assistance, 82.2 and 90.6 per cent of those receiving aid to dependent children in two categories.

Contributing Factors

As contributing factors in this situation, the report also declared:

Non-whites are 24 per cent of the population of metropolitan Washington, but live in only 20 per cent of the total dwelling units.

Non-whites live in 64 per cent of the units which have no running water, 69 per cent of the units without central heating, and 65 per cent of the units in need of major repairs. They also occupy 45 per cent of the dwelling units without installed cooking stoves, 44 per cent of those containing 1.51 or more persons per room and 40 per cent of those containing six or more persons per unit.

Beckett pointed out that work of the league this year must be limited by the fact that the $10,714 Community Chest allocation for the agency in 1949 will barely cover the salaries of its two professional workers, one stenographer and one part-time employe.

The league has attempted to initiate a plan of community organization in areas where the report asserts, the city "provided the worst of all its slums for the housing of uneducated immigrants from the rural South."

In the field of industrial relations, the league, while placing 156 persons during the year (one out of every four registered), put more emphasis on opening up new areas of employment to Negroes.

House to Get Police, Fire Pay Rise Bill

Rep. Davis to File Measure; Hearing Scheduled Friday

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said yesterday he will introduce a new bill to boost the pay of District police and firemen, and bring it up for hearings Friday.

Davis heads the House District Subcommittee in charge of police and fire legislation. His bill would give members of both departments a $330 retroactive increase to take effect as of last July. The measure also would apply to White House and Park Police.

Bill Filed in Senate

A similar bill was introduced yesterday in the Senate. It has the added feature of covering Washington teachers and other public school employes whose salaries are fixed by the teachers' pay laws.

The Senate bill was introduced by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) It would give police, firemen and teachers a $330 pay raise, retroactive to last July.

The House hearings before the Davis subcommittee will start at 10 a. m. Friday. They will be the first hearings limited to the District pay issue since municipal employes were barred last year from getting the pay boost granted then to Federal employes.

Davis yesterday introduced a second bill to increase the pensions of widows and children of District police and firemen, and also to increase the contribution which police and firemen make to their relief fund from the present three and one-half per cent of salary to five per cent.

Higher Pension Rates

Under the bill, the pension rates would be $125 a month for widows and $25 for each child, compared with present rates of $60 a month for widows and $10 for each child. Davis said the bill would not be considered at the Friday hearing under present plans.

Meanwhile, the Senate District Tax Subcommittee, headed by Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), called District fiscal officials to confer with today on the city revenue problem.

Chairman Hunt said today's meeting would be a preliminary to a joint session Wednesday with the House District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee, headed by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.).

2 Women Escape As Train Hits Car

Two unidentified women escaped injury when they abandoned their stalled automobile on a Pennsylvania Railroad crossing in Lanham, Md., a moment before it was demolished by the Colonial, Train No. 175, from Boston, due in Washington at 6:30 p. m., delaying its arrival here until 8:19.

A north-bound local passenger train also was held up on the adjoining track until trainmen removed the wreckage of the car. The Pennsylvania Railroad said the crossing watchman tried to flag the train but did not have sufficient time.

Harris Seeks Early Action To Extend Rent Control

District Measure Would Make Act Effective Through June 30, 1951

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said yesterday he plans to seek early action on a bill to extend District rent control through June 30, 1951.

Harris is sponsor of the bill and also chairman of the House District Judiciary Subcommittee which will handle the measure. He said he plans to call a preliminary meeting of his subcommittee this week to discuss its program for work on important measures, and he termed the District rent bill a "must" item.

At the same time, Harris made clear he is opposed to the idea, contained in some bills now before Congress, that the District and national rent control setups should be merged into one, operating under a single statute.

Separate From Start

The District and national laws for rent control have been kept separate from the start, although they have been made to conform in some features.

Harris said it would be "an almost impossible task" to merge the two laws now.

He said the paper work involved in a move to combine the District and National Rent Act would be "tremendous" and that the cost of it would throw a heavy financial load on the District.

Besides the 27-month extension of District rent control, the Harris bill calls for restoring converted housing to District rent control, and for a new section to protect tenants in buildings where the apartments are being sold through a cooperative setup.

Cogswell Backs Changes

Both changes have the backing of District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

The section on cooperatives would parallel the national rent control act by requiring that at least 65 per cent of the tenants in occupancy must hold stock in the cooperative or join it before eviction of other tenants can be started.

Newly converted housing was taken out from District rent control last year. The new bill would require the District rent administrator to take increased building costs into account in fixing rents for converted dwelling units.

$10,000 Bond Set For 3 Men Held In Hotel Holdup

Three men were charged yesterday in Municipal Court with the $48 holdup of the Alton Hotel, 1007 E st. nw., and were held under $10,000 each for grand jury action.

The defendants are Richard H. Sweet, 24, 1253 G st. se.; John F. Young, 21, 8321 Allentown rd., Prince Georges County, Md., and Merle McMillen, 25, of 1411 K st. se. They waived preliminary hearing.

Early Sunday, when police were making a routine check for a missing girl which led to the hotel, the defendants had just robbed the manager, George Croft.

Edward L. Carey, assistant United States Attorney handling the case, recommended $25,000 bond, but this was reduced by Judge George D. Neilson.

VA Worker Jailed On Assault Charge

James B. Fitzgerald, 35-year-old Veterans Administration employe, was sentenced to six months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday for assault and battery on a 13-year-old Chevy Chase boy.

Fitzerald was convicted of the assault in Bethesda Police Court several weeks ago, but Judge Warren Browning withheld sentence pending psychiatric examination of the defendant. According to testimony at the original hearing, Fitzgerald, who lives at 4503 Walsh st., Bethesda, made improper advances to the boy in the washroom of a Bethesda restaurant.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Browning said he was ordering the prison term "not only as a deterrent to the defendant, but as a deterrent to others of his kind who may be inclined to contaminate the youth of the community with their practices."

Laborer Held in Shooting

Edward Gales, 42, a laborer, was charged yesterday with shooting and seriously wounding his landlady with a shotgun. Bond was set at $10,000. A Municipal Court hearing was posponed a month. The woman, Mary Jane Lee, 44, of 504 L st. sw., is on the critical list at Gallinger Hospital. The shooting occurred Saturday during a party at the L st. address, according to police.

A hearing on a charge of permitting sale of whisky on Sunday against Milton F. Barrett, 51, owner of the Club La Conga, on Washington-Baltimore blvd. in Berwyn, was continued yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court until March 10.

Barrett and a waitress in his employ, Elizabeth Courtney, 28, of College Park, who is charged with illegal sale of whisky, are free on $500 bond. They were arrested January 23 by County Policeman Ralph Bond. Hearing for the waitress also was continued to March 10.

2d Offense Costs $200

Sterling E. Nair, 43, an interior decorator, 642 Morris pl. ne., was fined $200 yesterday and given a year's probation for a second-offense of driving while under the influence of alcohol.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of Municipal Court imposed sentence. Nair was first convicted of drunken driving in October, 1946, and pleaded guilty to the present offense. Police reported that Nair hit a parked car in front of 207½ E st. ne., left the scene, returned a few minutes later, and drove off again, being arrested two blocks away.

$20,000 Necklace Found

A $20,000 pearl necklace, reported lost last Friday by Mrs. Alice G. Murdock, of 4741 Reservoir rd. nw., has been found in her garage, police reported yesterday. Mrs. Murdock could not be reached for details. She originally reported that the necklace was lost somewhere between the Dupont Theater and her home.

Alexandria Stamp Asked

Chairman Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) of the Senate Civil Service Committee, yesterday filed in the Senate a committee report urging passage of a bill to issue a 6-cent airmail stamp this year for the 200th anniversary of Alexandria, Va. The bill amends a law approved last year calling for a 5-cent stamp, when that was the basic airmail rate.

Eviction Order Stayed

Eleven evictions in the Westmoreland Apartments, 2122 California st. nw., were ordered stayed yesterday in Municipal Court pending appeals. The tenants had lost their initial round in a fight against a cooperative housing arrangement at the Westmoreland, but announced they would seek a review of the case.

3 Area-Bound DPs Amid 399 To Land Today

Three Washington-bound Displaced Persons will be among 399 DP's scheduled to dock in New York City today, aboard the SS Marine Shark.

The DP's, whose passage here was paid by the International Refugee Organization, all have been assured housing and employment by sponsors who have guaranteed they will not become public charges.

Arrival of the new shipload will bring the total of DP's brought to this country under the 1948 Displaced Persons Act up to 3902. The 1948 act authorized entry of 205,000 DP's into this country.

Largest single group among the refugees who will arrive today bound for 21 States, is a contingent of 41 persons whose destination is Maryland. Most of the 41—all members of farm families—were sponsored by the United Ukrainian-American Relief Committee.

Hod Carrier Held In Woman's Death By Jury Ruling

James E. Wanzer, 36, a hod carrier of 308 50th st. ne., yesterday was ordered held for action of the grand jury at a coroner's inquest in the death of Jessie D. Myers, 30, who also lived at the 50th st. address.

Jessie Myers received scalp lacerations when she was struck on the head with a stick during an argument with Wanzer in the 200 block of Sullivan's ct. sw. December 29 police reported. At the time, she was treated at Providence Hospital and released.

Her head injuries later became infected and January 10 she was admitted to Providence Hospital for treatment of lockjaw. She died there last Saturday. Death was attributed to tetanus, congestive heart failure and lacerated scalp.

The coroner's jury ruled that Wanzer was responsible for her death.

Drunkometer Tests Tell on Tipsy Drivers . . .

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

MEASURED TO DECIMAL POINT—Designed to test presence of alcohol in systems of suspected drunken drivers, the portable Harger Drunkometer was demonstrated yesterday at luncheon of women's safety committee of the District Automobile Association at the Mayflower. Mrs. Lois Dennis, 3614 Connecticut ave. nw., one of the volunteers, blows up the balloon for an air sample as Laboratory Technician Mark Asp (left), Dr. Oscar Hunter and Laboratory Technician Joseph Hardee (right) record the data

Drunkometer Is Demonstrated Before D. C. Women's Group

A "drunkometer," designed to test the percentage of alcohol in the systems of suspected drunken drivers, was demonstrated yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the women's safety committee of the District Automobile Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

The portable Harger Drunkometer—which operates so simply a policeman can learn to use it at the scene of an accident—was explained by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, pathologist and director of the pathology departments at Doctors and Sibley Memorial Hospitals.

The drunkometer came through with flying colors in a test demonstration on three volunteer "guinea pigs"—two who helpfully swallowed doses of 4 ounces and 2 ounces of liquor, and the third water.

Statistical Tables Used

A half hour afterward—the period at which the system has absorbed the maximum alcohol content from the stomach—the volunteers submitted to the test.

Each blew up a balloon, air from which was then filtered through a purple solution of potassium permanganate. Breath which contains alcohol gradually changes the color of this solution to a dull yellow.

The drunkometer spotted the nondrinker. It judged the two-ounce consumer of liquor to have .041 per cent of alcohol in his system—not enough to influence his driving. It measured the consumer of four ounces of liquor to have .052 per cent of alcohol in her blood, or enough to make her driving ability "questionable."

Chemical tests measure the percentage of alcohol in the system, not the amount consumed, Dr. Hunter said, and take into account the fact that a 230-pound man can swallow more whisky than a 150-pounder before showing its effects.

Change in Law Asked

He recommended adoption of legislation to permit use of chemical test results as prima facie evidence in Washington courts. At present, test results can be introduced as evidence only when a medical specialist testifies to their meaning.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King said yesterday that because Dr. Hunter is "about the only qualified man in the city," and can't always appear in court on call, such evidence can only be introduced in approximately 50 per cent of drunken driving cases.

Police have been giving voluntary urine tests to persons accused of drunken driving since August, 1945, King said, and "practically all" drivers submit to the tests readily.

Legislation allowing introduction of the voluntary test results without supporting medical testimony in court cases here, has been approved by the Commissioners and is expected to clear the Bureau of the Budget within a few days, a District Building official said yesterday.

Group Calls For Improvements in Tubercular Care

A resolution calling for the District's tuberculosis control program "to be brought up to minimum requirements" was unanimously adopted last night by representatives of 42 District groups attending the meeting of the area organization section of the Citizens Committee to Aid Tuberculosis Control.

The plan, as outlined by William E. Leahy, chairman of the executive committee of the Washington Chest X-ray Survey, will be presented by Leahy, Friday, at a House Subcommittee's hearings on the District Health Department's budget.

Last night's meeting at the headquarters of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association, 1601 18th st. nw., also included a report of recent findings of the Washington Chest X-ray survey conducted last year.

Lecture to Open 'Freedom Day' Library Exhibit

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, will open a Library of Congress exhibit in observance of National Freedom Day with a lecture in the Coolidge Auditorium of the library at 11 a. m. today.

President Truman has proclaimed February 1 as a day for the people to pause "in solemn contemplation of the glorious blessings of freedom which we humbly and thankfully enjoy."

Congress authorized the annual observance last June 30 to commemorate the signing of the resolution of February 1, 1865 proposing the thirteenth (antislavery) amendment to the Constitution.

Third Man Dies From Injuries in Chillum Air Crash

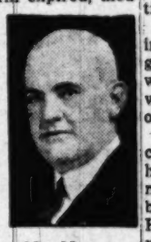
His companions, James M. Brown, 23, Cochranville, Chester County, Pa., and Willard Leroy Kirk, 30, of Oxford, Pa., were killed instantly in the crash.

Rice Means, Ex-Senator, Dead at 72

Rice W. Means, 72, former Republican Senator from Colorado, who lived in Washington for many years after his term expired, died Sunday at his home in Denver.



Mr. Means

Mr. Means, who was elected to the Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel D. Nicholson, served from 1924 to 1927. He later became president of the National Tribune Corp. here, which publishes the National Tribune Stars and Stripes, a veterans' newspaper.

He retired from this position in 1937 and returned to Denver. He made his home here at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Veteran of Two Wars

A veteran of the Spanish-American War and World War I, he was active in veteran affairs and served a term as commander of the District Department of the American Legion to which post he was elected in 1933. He previously had served as commander-inchief of the Society of the Army of the Philippines, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the United Spanish War Veterans.

Born in St. Joseph, Mo., Mr. Means was educated at the Sacred Heart College in Denver and received a degree in law from the University of Michigan in 1901.

In Colorado Offices

He served in several Colorado State offices including that of county judge in Adams County, and as a member of the State senate.

His interests were divided among military, political and veteran affairs. He enlisted in the Colorado National Guard at 18, and commanded a company of scouts in the Philippines in 1899. He was later awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery in the battle that led to the capture of Manila.

In World War I, as a lieutenant colonel, he commanded the Fourth Infantry Regiment during the Meuse-Argonne campaign.

Elks Donate $2400 For X-Ray Machine

A check for $2400 for a deep X-ray therapy machine for Children's Hospital was presented to Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., hospital director, by officers of the Washington Lodge of Elks last night at the hospital.

Elks attending the presentation ceremony included Guy A. Caponnetto, exalted ruler; Chester W. McLaughlin, past exalted ruler; Philip U. Gayaut, chairman of the social and community welfare committee which voted the appropriation; L. M. Young, lodge secretary; Theodore Schaum, trustee, and Maurice Whiton, committee member.

Bill to Hike Cost Limit Of GAO Building Asked

Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) yesterday introduced a Senate bill to increase the cost limit of the new General Accounting Office building here from $22,850,000 now authorized to $25,400,000.

The structure is to be located at 5th and G sts. nw. in the block north of the present General Accounting Office Building.

Senators File Bill For Superseding GSI

Senators Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) and Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) joined yesterday in introducing a bill to create a Federal corporation to take over operation of Government building cafeteries and other activities now handled by Government Services, Inc.

While a group of Government officials directs GSI, it is not a Government agency.

Newbold Dies; President of Evening Star

Fleming Newbold, 75, president of the Evening Star Newspaper Co., died unexpectedly of coronary thrombosis yesterday at his home, 1720 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today at St. John's Church, 821 16th st. nw. Burial will be private in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Newbold's death, which occurred at 12:45 a. m., followed a heart attack at about 11 p. m. Sunday, about an hour after he had talked by phone with his daughter, Mrs. John Morris Legendre at Aiken, S. C.

He had been in excellent spirits Sunday and had dined with a friend at home, Dr. John Preston, Evening Star physician, said. He had been under treatment for his heart condition for about two years.

News of his death brought many expressions of condolence from public officials and leaders in the newspaper business. Secretary of Defense Forrestal wired: "The country has lost a capable newspaperman and we have lost a good friend."

Began Career at 17

Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, said: Fleming Newbold was a competent newspaper publisher, constructive in his ideas and withal a friendly man. He was known to hundreds of members of the Associated Press and admired by them."

Mr. Newbold, who was named president of the Star last February 18, began his newspaper career at 17 as a clerk in the business department of the Star in 1890. He worked in all branches of the business and mechanical departments and became well known in advertising and publishing circles.

A direct personal approach, skill in business affairs and a thorough grasp of the newspaper business were characteristics he carried with him as he rose through various positions on the newspaper.

He was made superintendent of circulation in 1894. Six years later he was appointed assistant business manager, and in 1910 became business manager and a director. He held that position until 1944, when he was appointed manager. He was elected vice president of the newspaper company in 1935.

As president, he succeeded his brother-in-law, Frank B. Noyes, who resigned to become chairman of the board and who died last month.

Native of Ohio

A native of Dayton, Ohio, Mr. Newbold came to Washington at the age of 7 with his parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles Newbold. He attended the Force School and the old Central High School before obtaining his job with his first and only employer, the Evening Star.

Among the campaigns for which he was well known was a crusade for integrity in advertising, and he refused to carry many advertisements with questionable claims.

During the First World War Mr. Newbold was a member of a committee, with Bernard M. Baruch as chairman, which organized voluntary rationing of newsprint.

For many years a director of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, he was a former chairman of its bureau of advertising.

Interested in Farming

A director of the Riggs National Bank, Merchants Transfer & Storage Co. and the Columbia Planograph Co., he was also a member of the Board of Trade. He was vice president and a member of the board of governors of the Metropolitan Club, a member of the Alfalfa Club and of the Chevy Chase Club.

Mr. Newbold retained throughout his life an interest in farming which he gained as a boy, when he worked on his father's dairy farm, located on 16th st. nw., just north of where the Hotel 2400 now stands, and another farm in Anne Arundel County, Md.

Mr. Newbold's wife, the former Miss Ethel Seckendorff, died in September, 1946.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Legendre and Mrs. James S. Bush of St. Louis; four grandchildren, Nancy Ryan, Allan A. Ryan 3d, and Serena Stewart, children of Mrs. Bush, and Janet Legendre. John L. Newbold of 2435 Tracy pl. nw. is a surviving nephew.

Zionists Collect 168,000 Pounds of Food for Israel

The Mizrachi Zionist Organization of Washington collected 168,000 pounds of food in its 10-day Food for Israel campaign, Joseph J. Wineburgh, campaign director, announced last night.

Biggest donation in the drive was 64,000 pounds of staple foods valued at $4000, from Beth Sholom Congregation, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw.

The food was accepted by members of the Israeli Delegation to the United States and was started immediately on its way to Israel. Joseph Jolles is president of the local Mizrachi organization.

H. C. Maynor, Real Estate Broker, Dies

Henry Crawford Maynor, 75, District real estate broker for 25 years, died yesterday at 9 a. m. at Emergency Hospital from a heart ailment.

A native of Lee County, Alabama, Mr. Maynor was born January 30, 1874. In 1895, he moved to Texas, and for awhile operated a farm. Later, he became a wheat and cotton broker. He moved to Mount Rainier, Md., in 1923, and lived there for several years while working for the Hub Furniture Co.

Mr. Maynor went into the real estate business in 1926, and started his own firm at 2002 Rhode Island ave. ne. about that time. His first wife, Mrs. Annie Maynor, died in 1936.

He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Eudora B. Maynor, with whom he lived at 2605 Brentwood rd. ne., two brothers and two sisters.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, 22d and Jackson sts. ne. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Park.

Capt. Krieger Rites Slated At Graveside

Graveside services for Capt. Emil M. Krieger, who was killed in an explosion at Bremen, Germany, June 4, 1945, will be held Monday at 10:30 a. m. in Arlington National Cemetery.

Captain Krieger, who was 35 at the time of his death, was serving in Germany with the OSS. He died in the wreckage of the United States Military Government Police Headquarters.

A native of Pittsfield, Mass., he was a graduate of the Washington College of Law and was an FBI agent before entering the Marine Corps.

Prior to his assignment in Germany, he spent 28 months in the South Pacific and served on the staff of Admiral William F. Halsey. For heroic conduct in an explosion at the New Caledonia navy base in 1943 won the Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

He is survived by his widow, now Mrs. Ernest Branham of 5600 Overlea rd., Sumner, Md., and 10-year-old son, Robert Gerald Krieger.

Helps You Overcome FALSE TEETH Looseness and Worry

No longer be annoyed or feel ill-at-ease because of loose, wobbly false teeth. FASTEETH, an improved alkaline (non-acid) powder, sprinkled on your plates holds them firmer so they feel more comfortable. Soothing and cooling to gums made sore by excessive acid mouth. Avoid embarrassment caused by loose plates. Get FASTEETH today at any drug store.

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning

That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that 666 Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the 666 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, 666 Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on 666 Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. 666 Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Mary Haworth's Mail

High School Graduate, 20, Hasn't Held Any Job for Long, Due to Talking Too Much, So Mother Says; Can This Habit Be Controlled?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school graduate, 20 years old, and so far I haven't been able to hold any job very long. It isn't that I don't do my work well, but because I talk too much. Can you advise me how to overcome this bad habit?

I talk about my personal life and anything else, just so I talk. Also I like people and I am naturally friendly. I am fairly good looking but I have no friends, neither male nor female; all because of my silly talk, as mother says. Can you help me?' V. N.

Letter Certainly Isn't Too Chatty

DEAR V. N.: In its brevity, your letter doesn't "check" with your report that you talk too much. Ordinarily, men of few words reveal this trait in correspondence; just as people who talk their heads off usually write profusely also, once they get started.

As a case in point, here's a true story: A child, age 5, sagely remarked of an uncle whom she'd never met—he having lived abroad since prior to her birth,—"My Uncle Tom is a man of few words." Her mother started in surprise, then said, "Why, yes; come to think of it, that's true; but how did you know, darling?"

The youngster gazed at her in equal surprise and reprovingly said, "Anybody could tell by his letters." Which scored a bull's-eye, for his letters, customarily read aloud to the family, were laconic to a degree, and quite in keeping with his Coolidge-type reticence, a turn of temperament taken for granted by his adult kin and never once mentioned in the child's presence!

Thus I repeat, if you talk too much, you certainly don't write in character; and in this instance I wish you had talked more, to tell me about your family life, since the trouble is located there, I am sure. And I say this not on the basis of your mother's jibe, but because other implications of the story point in that direction.

Basic Problem Is Loneliness

MAKING TALK, just for the sake of talking, is an attempt to break out of isolation, psychological or social; and as such it is instinctively healthy, better far than talking to one's self, as some solitary folk get in the habit of doing. For that reason, older folk who must live alone are wise to keep a pet, a cat or dog, as many do—to whom companionable words of cajolery, approval or instruction may be sensibly addressed when silence weighs.

As you say, you have no friends of either sex, and yet your letter shows that you have normal intelligence, average education and a jolly outgoing disposition—but just "no takers." Consequently you try irrepressibly to get close to fellow workers, wearing wistfulness on your sleeve and offering confidences inappropriately. So the basic problem is loneliness, caused by unfavorable home conditions, in which fault-finding takes the place of real social helpfulness, I gather.

Since you write from a smallish city, where leading churches surely provide some recreational programs for youth, my advice is to scour this field in search of fellowship, going confidentially to the pastors for guidance and introductions in making friends, until you find the flock that cordially takes you in.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Antiques Exhibition Opens

ANTIQUES brought over from England only a few weeks ago, as well as some which came in a sailing vessel in the Eighteenth Century and others made by early American craftsmen, are included in the sixth Washington Antiques Exposition, which opened yesterday.

Sponsored by the Children's Museum of Washington, the exposition presents one of the largest collections of antiques ever shown here. It will continue through Friday in the Presidential Ballroom of the Hotel Statler.

For the first time an English firm is presenting a collection in the show this year. Saint and Gillingham of London have brought over some 50 examples of the work of the three leading cabinetmakers of the Eighteenth Century, Thomas Chippendale, George Hepplewhite, and Thomas Sheraton. These include a Sheraton burr-mahogany oval dining table with typical cross-banding, a very rare George II spice cabinet, and a superbly figured mahogany secretaire bookcase.

Antique dealers from 18 States, the District of Columbia, and Toronto, Canada, are presenting collections ranging from colorful Pennsylvania Dutch furniture to exquisite silver, china, and glassware at the show. Directed by Mrs. John Freeman Brown, it is open from 11 a. m. to 10:30 p. m.

On Thursday, Garden Clubs of Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia will present flower arrangements in antique containers. Judges will be Mrs. Herbert Greger and Mrs. Lomax Tayloe. Antiques will be awarded as prizes.

Snow Can't Keep Capitalites From Viewing Spring Fashions

By Peggy Preston

IT TAKES MORE THAN a traffic-snarling snowfall to deter Washington women from the path of fashion.

Both of yesterday's regular fashion show luncheons, at the hotels Mayflower and Statler respectively, snared their usual share of feminine spectators. Proving, we suppose, that the proverbial postman isn't the only lad who gets around despite the weather.

In the Mayflower Lounge, while viewing the parade of Spring fashions, Mrs. C. J. Mack lunched with Mrs. Walter George, Mrs. Thurmond Chatham, wife of the new Repersentative from North Carolina, and Mrs. Karl Stefan. Miss Bertha Joseph was there wearing her trusty fedora, and others in attendance included Mrs. Clifford Davis, Mrs. Leigh Wade, artist Greta Kempton and Mrs. Ernest Johnson.

Miss Bab Lincoln entertained for a group who had appeared on a recorded broadcast with her just before the fashion show hour. Included were Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, and Miss Virgila Stephens. At a nearby table Miss Betty MacKensie was hostess at a luncheon in honor of Miss Mary Denning, who is engaged to marry Richard Daly. Guests included Miss Helen Snelling, Mrs. Kenneth Brown, Miss Mary Stuart Price, and Mrs. Zeake Johnson, Jr.

DATES for benefit fashion shows are piling up so rapidly it is difficult to keep track of them all. One of the latest is March 1, the day selected by the Women's National Democratic Club for a big fashion fete at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, founder, first and present president of the organization, says it is to be a combination luncheon and show. Proceeds will go to the club's building fund.

Chairman of the benefit is Mrs. Lorton Sims. On her committee are Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Braxton Jones, Mrs. Floyd L. Cook, Mrs. John McClintock, Mrs. James Murray, Mrs. William P. Cochrane, Mrs. W. John Kenney, Mrs. Julian N. Friant, Mrs. Paul Porter, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Edward R. Halloran, Mrs. Albert Y. Woodward, Mrs. Claude R. Orchard, Mrs. St. George L. Sioussat, Mrs. Jackson Davis and Miss Gertrude V. D. Prisley.

Widen Your Interests For a Slimming Tonic

By Ida Jean Kain

ANALYZE WHAT you do when bored . . . it may well be the clew to your weight problem.

Do you perchance energetically clean out the attic, or rearrange the furniture in the living room? Maybe you stand back and direct the moving, personally handling the lamps. "Here sonny, bend down and push this plug in . . . I think this lamp will look fine here, and the other plug goes in over there . . ."

Well, even if you don't do the actual work, it's slimming—that is, it's better than going to the cookie jar, or curling up with a mystery story and a box of chocolates.

There is no doubt about it, overweight begins with boredom. When there isn't anything interesting to do, it's easy to turn to overeating. It's a sort of solace. Then it quickly becomes habit . . . fattening habit.

This urge to be always eating may stem from something deeper than boredom. The real cause may be anxiety or unhappiness, worry, a broken romance, or no romance. Eating is a balm for troubled minds. It helps to assuage vague dissatisfactions. Food represents security and comfort.

It's this often and little eating that makes for overweight, and it takes gumption to recognize why you want to be going to the refrigerator or the bread box all day long. Once you face the reason and set about remedying the cause, it's easy to break the habit. Don't start with the habit . . . get at the cause first.

Let's say you have a hankering for a snack along about 10:30 in the morning . . . oh, you've tried to break it, but it keeps nagging at your mind. Try diversion. Exercise can be diverting. An up-and-doing circulation can banish boredom and take your mind off your troubles, and off food. Turn on the music and do some rhythms. Stretch up . . . bend rhythmically . . . get a lift. Fifteen minutes of moving to music, moving buoyantly and freely can pull your spirits and your figure out of the dumps. Rhythms are fun . . . and slimming.

If the middle of the afternoon finds you at low ebb, try to break the routine and get out of the house. A new hat is a tonic; but prices being what they are, that's out. Try a brisk walk . . . that's a tonic too, you'll come back feeling alive. Or join a class in rhythms at the YWCA.

If you feel at loose ends and have two hours to spare in the afternoon, offer your services to a hospital. There you will feel needed. It's important to feel needed.

Find ways to widen your interests . . . you won't want to overeat.

All Vie for Booby Prize As Wintoun Guests Hunt Treasures in Georgetown

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THIS was one of those long, very long weekends with Washington up to its stiff neck in the so-called social whirl. Highlights of the exhausting 56-hour span were:

A DINNER given for a small, unobtrusive gent reputed to control the votes of several Indian tribes in our fabulous Southwest. The guest of honor, in delicate tribute to his hostess presented her with an Indian war bonnet, reduced in scale for comfortable wearability (the chapeau should cause a riot on its approaching debut at the Mayflower Lounge).

AT THE METROPOLITAN CLUB, a glimpse of intriguing Maj. Robert T. Lincoln, briefly here from Iran and WITHOUT his dark glasses.

THE RETURN, we hope permanently, of the J. Van Cortlandt Wintouns. The Wintouns, whose gyrations from Cannes to Cairo, from Monte Carlo to Moscow, added postwar zip to the Paris Herald's somewhat arid social column, have procured a small Georgetown house. Mrs. W. had scarcely unscrambled her Diors and Schiaparellis, her Reboux and Paulettes, before dispatching invitations to (1) a cocktail party; (2) a treasure hunt.

THE cocktail affair turned out better than could be expected on such scant notice. Eila Wintoun's tiny pied-a-terre, thrown open from stem to stern, can more or less "stand" a hundred guests. So, expecting a percentage of refusals, she invited a round hundred. To her surprise, but intense gratification, some 175 (estimated by liquor consumption) blew in. In no time at all, the mounds of finger sandwiches, the button-sized biscuits, the delicious hot canapes (all set on a magnificent silver and rose brocade tablecloth clever Eila had "picked up" for a song just outside the Kremlin), to say nothing of a brave assortment of hams, smoked turkeys and regiments of indescribable hors d'oeuvres—had disappeared.

At 8:15 the Wintouns' Scotch gave out, at 9 or thereabouts the Bourbon ran dry and just a few minutes before 11, when the last drop of gin found its merry way into a martini, the ultimate uninvited guest vamoosed.

TO RECAPTURE a nostalgic breath of dear, prewar Paris, Eila and J. J. decided on a treasure hunt. Their guests, bundled in ermine and fitch-dyed sable, turned up, rarin' to go, with unexpected punctuality.

The various assignments were typed on crested cards and, after a bracing stirrup cup, couples whizzed off in different directions. Prizes offered were a three-wheeled Davis car for the man; a complete overhauling at Elizabeth Arden' for the woman. Booby prize was, perhaps, most historically valuable of all—a Dewey button, autographed, plus a snippet (acquired at great price from the Governor's barber) of America's most famous mustache.

Here's what the 24 couples were expected to retrieve (1) one of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's chopsticks. (2) An old concert program from Margaret Truman. (3) A hair plucked from John L. Lewis' eyebrow. (4) A left shoe of Vice President Barkley's handsome, special last footwear. (5) A can of Leslie Biffle's special tomato juice. (6) A curl of Senator Connally's. (7) A discarded page, legible if possible, of an original Arthur Kroch column. (8) Barnaby's fairy godfather.

AFTER their guests had departed, the Wintouns relaxed gratefully with a couple of highballs. It was well after midnight when the first hunters straggled in. They were loaded down with entertaining subterfuges which the Wintouns quickly rejected. They had massed chopsticks from the Good Earth restaurant, the program of Margaret Truman's concert from an old Paul Hume column, shoes of various sizes, none of them belonging to the Vice President; instead of tomato juice a bottle of Bourbon (evidently a Christmas present) with Leslie Biffle's card still tethered to its neck; swatches of hair unmistakably yanked from upholstery; instead of a Krock page, a half paragraph written in Mary Haworth's handwriting.

Oddly enough, everyone had the same idea about Barnaby's fairy godfather. At one time or another during the evening, each couple converged on the Clark Cliffords' Chevy Chase residence. Fortunately, the Cliffords were either out of town or having a snack with some unidentified brain truster.

Since no one could be said to have won, J. J. wisely decided to keep the Davis car (anyway, it's still on order), while Eila, when necessary, could use the Arden refurbishing. Everyone, however, claimed the booby prize. Luckily, there were plenty of buttons and autographs to go 'round, but naturally the piece de resistance was the mustache snippet.

The Wintouns split hairs finely as possible, crossed their hearts (and fingers) they would recontact the Governor's barber, acquire snippets for all. After this momentous decision had been taken, the Wintouns and their guests settled down to polish off the amusing evening.

A wonderful weekend and even more wonderful to have the Wintouns around!

Decatur House Party to Honor Navy Historians

THE NAVAL HISTORICAL FOUNDATION will be hosts February 9 at an afternoon reception in Mrs. Truxtun Beale's home, Decatur House, to commemorate the sesquicentennial anniversary of the U. S. Frigate Constellation victory over the French man-o'-war L'Insurgente.

The frigate was commanded by Commodore Thomas Truxtun, an ancestor of the late Mr. Beale. Celebrating the doughty commodore's prowess, however, is merely a pleasant subterfuge for assembling a group of Washingtonians interested in naval history. The guests will be shown the recently completed plans for revamping Mrs. Beale's coach house into a museum for the Foundation. The alterations have been drawn by Mrs. Mark Edwin Andrews, wife of the Navy's Assistant Secretary and, under her maiden name Lavone Dickinsheets Scott, one of Houston's outstanding architects.

The coach house, which stands behind Decatur House, will have a separate entrance on H st. and comprise a single, large exhibition room, a library plus the requisite number of offices. All sorts of naval mementos will be exhibited, ranging from a fine collection of prints, to maps and manuscripts, from such oddments as souvenirs removed from famous ships, to Commodore Truxtun's 12-foot gun. The gun, though of indubitable historical interest, is causing no end of headache to architect and builders.

Makins Entertain on 'Australia Day'

By Elizabeth Maguire

IN AUSTRALIA yesterday, everybody went down to the beaches. It was Australia Day, the day in 1788 when Gov. Arthur Phillip proclaimed the first Australian settlement in Sydney, New South Wales.

In Washington diplomats and residential society drove up an icy hill to be received at the Australian Embassy by the cordial Ambassador and Mrs. Makin. Outside in the garden a large white kangaroo stood in place of the traditional snow man.

Strains of Viennese waltzes greeted guests as they entered. They were received by the host and hostess in the library, and cocktails were passed in the drawing room. After milling around for chats, guests drifted into the dining room where a wonderful buffet was served. Everything was perfection from cheese puffs to cream puffs and coffee.

Miniature Fountain

In the center of the lace covered buffet table was a miniature fountain lighted up and surrounded with red carnations. Coffee was served at one end and tea at the other. There were thinly sliced Virginia hams bordered with pineapple and olives, and also turkeys and saveral different salads. Added to that were a variety of tiny tid-bits and cream puffs that melted away at once.

A colorful trio having supper together were the wife of the new Ambassador of Ceylon, Mme. Corea, the wife of the Indian Ambassador, Lady Rama Rau, and Mme. ElKhouri, wife of the Syrian Minister. It was the first appearance of Mme. Corea, who arrived in Washington a week ago Monday. Petite and pretty, she was dressed in rich, red sari bordered in gold.

Her earrings were diamonds, and she wore three diamonds in her nose.

Animated Conversation

Across the room the Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, and the Syrian Minister, Faiz El-Khouri, could be seen engrossed in conversation punctuated with gesticulations. Later the two were joined by the Ambassador of Pakistan, M. A. H. Ispahani, who added his gesticulations.

The new Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina attended the party, she in blue frock and halo of gray foxY. Pretty Mme. Kleinwaechter attended alone, as her husband, the Minister of Austria has gone to Mexico where he is also accredited Minister. Another lady minus her husband was Mrs. Boheman, wife of the Swedish Ambassador, who is now in Stockholm.

Mrs. Claude Pepper and Mrs. Patrick Jay Hurley had an animated talk in the drawing room. The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann were among the guests, and also the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais.

Among the Diplomats

Others included the Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde, the Ambassador of Canada and Mrs. Wrong, the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Franks, the Ambassador of Italy and chic Signora Tarchiani, She dressed in coq feathered hat and Persian lamb; the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon and the Ambassador of Afghanistan, his Royal Highness Sardar Mohammed Naim Khan.

Residential guests at the party included Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. James Souby, and Mrs. Louis E. Denfeld who was there in mink cape and brown straw tied with green taffeta. Among embassy members were the Commercial Counselor and Mrs. Garside, Miss Dorothy Stirling, the Naval Attache and Mrs. Morrow, and the Air Attache and Mrs. Watson.

The Washington Post

ON the occasion of Australia Day, the British Ambassador (center) and Lady Franks (right) are greeted at a reception at the embassy by the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin. Guests were received in the library between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock

On the Party Front . . .

THE Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt, who are leaving shortly for Cuba, were honored at a small luncheon yesterday by the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila. The luncheon was given at the legation residence on Woodland dr. at 1 o'clock.

Covers were laid for seven. Guests were Dr. Luis Machado, appointee to the post of honorary Consul General of Finland to Havana; Mme. Boheman, wife of the Ambassador of Sweden, and Alexis de Aminoff, Charge d'Affaires of the Embassy of Sweden.

In the evening, the Ambassador and Senora de Belt were the honor guests of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, who entertained at a small dinner at her home.

Greek Party Honors Visiting Bank Governor

THE cocktail hour found a large gathering at the home of Greek Counselor and Mme Economou-Gouras, who entertained in honor of the visiting Governor of the Bank of Greece and Mme. Mantzavinos.

Guests included the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Snyder, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp, Mr. and Mrs. William Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Knapp, Camille Gutt, Sir Herbert and Lady Broodley, Sir Theodore Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. John Shields and a number from the Diplomatic Corps.

Dinner Given At Spanish Embassy

Mrs. Goodwin Gives Party for Miss Morgan

MRS. CLARENCE NORTON GOODWIN entertained yesterday afternoon for Miss Pauline Morgan, who is leaving soon for her home in London. The remaining Marshall Plan princesses, who went to Birmingham, Ala., for the Christmas Carnival comprised the guest list.

These included Princess Sophia Lippi of Austria, Miss Bodil Ring of Denmark, Miss Kim van der Kopple of the Netherlands and Miss Marie Louise de Pingre of Luxembourg.

West Point '42 Wives To Meet Tomorrow

WIVES of the West Point class of '42 will have their monthly luncheon tomorrow at 12 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Robert W. Beers of Spring Valley. Mrs. Beers will be assisted by Mrs. Wayne G. McCarthy. Bridge will follow luncheon and prizes will be given for the highest and lowest scores.

Mrs. Frank B. Clay, newly elected president of the club, will discuss future plans and activities, including a dance to be given in February.

Le Cercle Francais To Meet Friday

Le Cercle Francais de Washington will meet Friday evening, February 4, at 8 p. m., at the Penwomen's Studio on Columbia rd. Songs by French composers will be sung by Miss Elizabeth McGrory, accompanied by Miss Gladys Cunningham. Mlle. Colette Dautel, a recent arrival in this country, will give a brief talk.

Mrs. Charles R. Brasier and Miss Cunningham will be hostesses for the evening.

North Carolina Alumnae To Hold April Luncheon

The Washington Alumnae Chapter, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, has scheduled a luncheon for April 30 as its next gathering.

Local alumnae were brought up to date on college affairs when Miss Katherine Taylor, Dean of Women at the Greensboro Branch of the Greater University of North Carolina, appeared as guest speaker, Friday, January 28.

Envoy Tells Of Brazilian Women's Role

By Genevieve Reynolds

BRAZIL'S modern women have equal educational and employment opportunities with men. They hold top posts in the professions and are both politically aware and active. So revealed Maurico Nabuco, Ambassador from Brazil, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

The Brazilian women never were regarded as chattels as in many countries," the Ambassador said. He pointed out that the Constitution of 1824 assured Brazilian women the right of nationality, over 100 years before it was granted to he rsisters in France and Italy and many years ahead of the United States."

Terming the "right of nationality" the most important civic right of all," the envoy pointed out that if a Brazilian woman marries a foreigner she retains her own nationality.

Ambassador Nabuco said that the Brazilian woman's future in the Diplomatic Corps had been taken care of by the Portuguese language, which provides a special term for a feminine ambassador. Abascadoria means a woman ambassador in her own right, not the wife of one. "When you get a woman ambassador, you'll have to coin a new word for her," he quipped laughingly. "We have the word but not the woman yet."

Referring to the past role of Brazil's fairer sex, Envoy Nabuco declared that it was a woman—Princess Isabella, who abolished slavery in that land in 1888."

He told the group that Brazil was the second country in the world to have telephones. It happened when the Emperor Don Pedro II came to the Philadelphia exhibition in 1876 and insisted on meeting Alexander Graham Bell, then unheralded inventor of the telephone.

As for life in Brazil today in general, Ambassador Nabuco averred that is one of the biggest democracies in the world. "A man's worth is the ruling factor in Brazil. His race, color, creed or family do not determine his place in society," he asserted.

During the question-answer period the Ambassador said that many DPs are going into Brazil, and that the only restriction placed upon them was a matter of ability." A DP can choose any profession for which he is trained and equipped," he said.

Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, presented the speaker.

Teen-Agers Give Carolina Recipes

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

KEITH BLOUNT, 13, 4-H Club member from Laris, S. C., explains to Representative John L. McMillan of South Carolina and Miss Caralyn DeBerry how his favorite sweet potato dish is made. Keith, along with 10 other South Carolina boys, won a trip offered by the State extension service and a grocery chain for their fine record in growing sweet potatoes. They brought along Carolina recipes for sweet potato dishes and several were served yesterday at luncheon in the House of Representatives restaurant.

By Lucia Brown

ELEVEN South Carolinians who know plenty about growing—and cooking—sweet potatoes visited Washington yesterday.

They're all 'teen-aged boys, 4-H Club members, who won a trip to Washington, Philadelphia and New York for their prowess in sweet potato growing. But yesterday, at luncheon at the House of Representatives dining room, they were much more eager to talk about the succulent sweet potato dishes made "down home" than about the fine points of agriculture.

Sweet potato cookery nowhere approaches the heights that it does in the Palmetto State, believe the boys, and they brought along recipes dug from their mothers' cook books to prove it. If everybody could taste these South Carolina dishes, the boys said, all growers would have to double their yields per acre, as did the 4-H clubbers in the contest that brought them to Washington.

Baked sweet potatoes are the favorites of 13-year-old Bert Hubbard, who, incidentally, was getting his first sight of snow here yesterday. Bert is from Hardeeville, S. C. By baked, he not only means the "regular kind" but the following mouth-watering treat:

SWEET POTATOES IN THE HALF SHELL

Bake potatoes which are uniform in size; cut in two lengthwise and scrape out centers, being careful not to cut the skins. Mash the pulp, season with salt, sugar, butter and either raisins, shredded coconut, pineapple or pecans. Place in the potato shells, cover with marshmallow halves and brown in the oven.

SWEET POTATOES are about the best thing you can find for pie-making, said freckle-faced, sandy-haired John Thomas Hayes from Horry County, S. C. He was member of a winning team of six in his county in the contest sponsored by the State Extension Service. The recipe for sweet potato pie, brought from South Carolina by the boys, follows:

SWEET POTATO CUSTARD PIE

2 cups mashed sweet potatoes
1 cup sweet milk
2 eggs
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon butter

Beat 2 egg yolks and 1 egg white well and stir in cooked and mashed potatoes. Add melted butter and other ingredients. Pour into a pie tin lined with rich pastry. Bake in moderate oven until custard is set.

Meanwhile, add a pinch of cream of tartar to the remaining egg white. Beat stiff and mix in 2 tablespoons of sugar. Spread over top of pie and put into a slow oven until it is a delicate brown. (If desired, nutmeg or cinnamon may be used in seasoning the sweet potato mixture too.)

TWO sets of brothers, Bill and Jimmie Anderson, and Joe and Sam Strickland, all of Horry County, were among the winners of the trip awarded by a grocery chain. Strenuous family rivalry developed among them while the contest was in progress but they were unanimous in endorsing this unusual dessert, called "Sweet Potato Pone."

SWEET POTATO PONE

4 eggs
2 cups sweet milk
1 quart grated or ground raw sweet potato
1 cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt

Beat eggs, without separating, until well mixed. Add the milk and stir. Mix the spices and sugar with the sweet potato, add the melted butter, mix with the eggs and milk. Butter sides and bottom of pudding pan. Pour into the pudding. Bake one hour in a moderate oven. Stir occasionally as the potatoes brown on the sides and top. The pudding should be grainy or nutty. Grated lemon rind and juice may be used for flavoring. The pudding may be served plain or with a sauce or whipped cream. If the potato is grated directly into the milk it will keep it from darkening.

About Girls Camps

I would like to find out the names and addresses of all the girls' camps in the New England States. I have tried several libraries, but they couldn't help me. J. W. M.

I suggest you write to the Chambers of Commerce in the State capitals of each of the New England States. Each undoubtedly has a prepared list of the approved camps in the State which can be sent to you.

Is it correct to wear white cotton gloves all the year around? At which occasions must one wear white kid gloves? J. L. S.

I have not been able to find any rule which governs the wearing of cotton versus white kid gloves. It seems to be common practice here to wear either cotton and kid for informal occasions when a short or below elbow length is worn. For formal occasions, when elbow length white gloves are warn, kid or doeskin is usually the material chosen.

My aquamarine rayon gabardine dress has had milk spilled on it and dry cleaners have said the large stain resulting can be removed only by damp cleaning the entire dress. There is no guarantee that shrinkage will not result. I wish to avoid this and would appreciate your advice as to what alternate methods may be pursued without damage to the dress. S. S.

I'll have to go along with the dry cleaners in their suggestion that damp cleaning is the only way to remove this stain, if it can be removed at all. You could get some idea as to how the fabric will react to water by clipping a small portion from an inside hem or seam and trying it out. Use barely warm water and the mildest soap or soapless detergent. If the sample shrinks in washing, press it while quite damp to see if you can return it to its original size. Often rayons which are badly shrunk while wet will ease back to the original size by gently pulling them as you press with a warm iron.

If, after your experimentation, you feel you can wash it, use the same method as described above. When washed and rinsed, hang on a well-padded hanger to dry, and when still damp, press on the wrong side. Since to stretch it, the fabric must be ironed wetter than usual, it may be necessary to give it a preliminary pressing and then hang it up again to dry completely. Then go over the dress again, giving particular attention to seams and heavy spots.

Do you know of a shop that cleans and repairs aluminum kitchen ware? My tea kettle has a heavy deposit on the inside surface that has failed to respond to scraping, rust-remover and a variety of cleansing powders. A large saucepan leaks where the handle is loose. E. C. P.

Some of the firms listed under "tinners" in the yellow pages of the telephone book will occasionally do small jobs on kitchen utensils as a favor to their customers when their regular work is not pressing. However, such repairs often cost almost as much as a new utensil, so are not always a wise expenditure.

As for the scale on the tea kettle, here is one possibility for removing it. Set the dry kettle on a low flame, allowing it to heat gently. The expansion of the metal as the kettle heats will usually cause the deposit to chip and become loose. Be sure to stand by throughout the entire process and do not continue heating more than 5 to 7 minutes. Another method is to fill the kettle with a solution of 4 cups of water to 1 cup of vinegar. Bring this to a boil and allow to stand overnight. If this removes some of the deposit, but not all, the treatment can be repeated.

I received a pair of very nice poultry shears for Christmas. Can you tell me what they should be used for? G. M.

Poultry shears are used to cut through joints or gristly parts when carving fowl or roasts at the table. If you wished, you could also use them in cutting up food in preparation, such as greens for salads, marshmallows, and dried fruit. Some shears come with a roughened portion on the back of the blade for use in scaling fish.

Montgomery Home Rule To Be Studied

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31.—How the Maryland General Assembly can help make home rule work in Montgomery County will be the subject of a meeting here Tuesday night.

Members of the county's legislative delegation, who have been here since January 5 when the General Assembly convened, have eagerly awaited the scheduled meeting with members of the new county council.

Thus far in the 1949 session of the Legislature, there has been a hiatus on Montgomery County legislation, pending the conference with the county council.

Local lawmakers have taken the stand it would be "inappropriate" to sponsor legislation affecting administration of the county government now under the new home-rule charter until the council has had a chance to express its needs.

Will Map Program

According to word received here, the council will devote most of the afternoon after its regular Tuesday morning session in the Rockville court house to mapping a legislative program. Several discussions already have been held, however.

Certain to be discussed at the joint meeting between the legislators and councilmen is the question of raising Montgomery's 7 per cent bonded debt limit.

At present, the county's debt is already slightly in excess of 7 per cent and the council was recently confronted with a school board request for $11,000,000 in bonds this year to finance new school construction.

Other issues, it was learned, will be question of returning to the county government some functions now assumed by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

As the Legislature held a brief session tonight, two bills aimed at forcing St. Marys County commissioners to issue $550,000 in already approved school construction bonds was being readied.

Delegate Oliver R. Guyther (D., St. Marys) currently at odds with the St. Marys commissioners on the school bond question, said he would introduce the legislation on Tuesday.

One of the bills, he explained, would force the commissioners to issue $200,000 in bonds approved by the 1947 General Assembly. The other would require similar action on another bond issue of $350,000 approved in a county referendum last fall.

Still up in the air is what action the Senate will take on an Administration-sponsored move to reduce the State tax on earned income from 2½ to 2 per cent.

Bottled in Committee

The measure, which saw speedy passage in the House, has been bottled up in the Senate Finance Committee. Tax returns are due April 15.

Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) said tonight the present income tax requirement on non-residents hits hardest those Washington residents working at Federal installations in nearby Maryland. Maryland residents working in the District are not required to pay in Washington, he said.

Sothoron announced that a meeting of the Senate Finance Committee would be held Tuesday. Comptroller James J. Lacy will testify.

2 Firms Fined; Trucks Drop Mud On County Roads

The Maryland State Roads Commission yesterday won two more court battles in its fight to "clean up" Prince Georges County highways that are made dangerous by mud dropped by construction project trucks.

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie of Hyattsville Police Court, fined the Republic Engineering Corp., Silver Spring, $100 for "permitting hazardous or injurious materials to be dropped on a public highway"—a violation of the State Motor Vehicle Code.

A $50 fine for the same offense was levied against the Standard Construction Co., of Washington. Both construction companies pleaded guilty to the charge.

The Republic Engineering Corp., according to testimony by J. Paul Smith, of Upper Marlboro, resident engineer for the commission, had been warned to remove dirt and mud at an apartment project at New Hampshire ave. extended and University lane. The Standard Construction Co. was charged in connection with similar conditions at a development on Ager rd., near West Hyattsville.

Gas Fumes Fatal To Caretaker of Laurel Academy

An employe of St. Mildred's Academy, Laurel, Md., was found dead in his quarters there early yesterday, a victim of coal gas fumes from a wood stove.

He was Charles E. Kelly, 59, caretaker and handyman at the academy. A certificate of accidental death by carbon monoxide poisoning was issued yesterday afternoon by Dr. John T. Maloney, deputy Prince Georges County medical examiner, after an autopsy.

Kelly's body was found in his bed by firemen of the Laurel Fire Department, who were called when academy personnel were unable to rouse the caretaker for breakfast, according to Dr. Maloney. They noticed a heavy odor of coal gas emanating from a wood stove in the two-room quarters, it was reported.

The body was removed to Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville.

Father-Son Joint Recital Rewarding

By Paul Hume

A joint recital by father and son is an uncommon occurrence in the musical world. Arthur Schnabel and his son, Karl Ulrich, have done joint recitals on two pianos. Adolf Busch often plays publicly with his son-in-law, Rudolf Serkin; and perhaps Robert Casadesus and his rising pianist son, Jean, play two-piano music together within the family circle.

Last night's Phillips Gallery concert brought Louis Potter, senior and junior, before an audience which anticipates their yearly appearances in Washington. The father is the pianist, the son plays the cello. Their program drew upon old Sebastian Bach, who had several musical sons, upon Beethoven, who had no sons, and upon Robert Schumann whose sons were not musical.

But the evening's most challenging listening came during Nicholas Lopatnikoff's new Variations and Epilogue. In this, a theme is varied five times and recalled in an epilogue, the whole comprising a rewarding addition to a limited repertoire. The fourth variant is a remarkably beautiful matter of muted cello tone and highly chromatic harmony. It was superbly set forth. Rapid motions of the opening and closing variations were also exciting.

A repeated figure in the piano made the final section stand out, in a work otherwise less interesting rhythmically than harmonically. The composer, who has taught in this country for a decade, has often written for strings. He does so with a fine ear for effect and an understanding of the technicalities involved.

A Bach sonata at the beginning of the program showed how completely Bach can surprise the modern listener with the audacity of his harmonic schemes. The andante was one of the amazing moments of our experience as it unfolded clashing dissonances and resolutions in the piano while the solo cello sustained a long pedal point. The work as a whole had moments of uncertainty in tone and intonation. These matters improved in the early Beethoven sonata which followed. The concert closed with Schumann's Adagio and Allegro.

Krug Urges Conservation Be Stepped Up

A plea for greater efforts in conservation of natural resources was made by Interior Secretary J. A. Krug before the Senate Interior Committee yesterday.

"We cannot prevent the erosion measured by the silt coloring the Rio Grande River right now," he declared, "but what we do today to the water and the soil and the grass and forest cover of that great valley will be measured by the color of that river 10 years from now.

"In that color will be reflected the well-being of the people of the area, and the strength and security of our Nation."

Although declaring that he doesn't want to join the "scare school" of conservationists, Krug told the Senators:

1. For every two tons of coal mined, one has been left in the ground.

2. More energy is being wasted through the flaring of natural gas in the fields than is being produced by the entire series of Tennessee Valley Authority dams.

3. The weight of the average automobile has increased substantially in the face of declining iron ore and petroleum reserves.

4. In harvesting timber, one third has been left as waste in the forest.

5. The public range land has been overgrazed, at the cost of less meat and wool tomorrow.

Alexandrian Held For Grand Jury

A man accused of stealing $86 from a seafood and poultry market—located directly behind Alexandria Police Headquarters—yesterday was held for the grand jury by Alexandria Civil and Police Court.

Roy M. Briscoe, 28, of 408 King st., Alexandria, is charged with grand larceny. Detectives said he came into the Alexandria Seafood and Poultry Market on Saturday and ran off with the money when the manager's back was turned.

The $86 had been put in an envelope preparatory to depositing it in the bank.

Basing-Point Price Assured Court Review

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to review one of the cases which has led to demands for new legislation to clear up uncertainty about legality of the so-called basing point system of pricing.

In other actions, the high court:

1. Refused to review a War Assets Administration sale of a Government-built blast furnace at Granite City, Ill. The United States Court of Appeals here said while there was no right to sue, the case was "surrounded by a pervasive and most offensive odor of skullduggery."

Do Not Take Precedence

2. Ruled that wage claims against a bankrupt company do not take precedence over tax claims made by the United States.

3. Denied a request by former Gov. Coke Stevenson of Texas to review his election dispute with Senator Lyndon B. Johnson. Johnson was declared winner of the Democratic runoff primary by an 87-vote margin.

Under the basing point method, a manufacturer quotes identical delivered prices on his products to all customers in a given area, regardless of the freight haul involved. He does this by averaging out freight costs.

In Restraint of Competition

The court last April upheld a Federal Trade Commission finding that the American Cement Institute and individual cement companies used the basing point system illegally in restraint of competition. Businessmen said this created confusion in industry, and seek clarifying legislation.

The case which the court today agreed to review involves a commission ruling against a group of manufacturers of conduit, the pipe used to carry electric wires in building construction.

The United States Circuit Court at Chicago upheld the commission finding that use of the basing point method may be illegal even though there is no conspiratorial agreement between companies on its use.

Justice Burton delivered the unanimous opinion of the court in the bankruptcy case.

The United States Court of Appeals in San Francisco had decided that wage claims totaling $3424 against the bankrupt Kessco Engineering Corp. of Los Angeles should be paid ahead of tax liens of the Federal Government. The Justice Department asked the Supreme Court to reverse this finding, which it did.

Ewing Report On Health Called 'False'

A doctor charged yesterday that a health program report made by Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing contained "downright lies."

The physician, Dr. Paul R. Hawley, wartime chief Army medical officer in the European theater and later medical chief of the Veterans Administration, made the charge in a letter to Senator Lodge (R., Mass.). Lodge put the letter in the Congressional Record.

Hawley said he was named by Ewing as a member of the executive committee of the National Health Assembly meeting held here last May.

He said the committee had no voice in arrangements nor in Ewing's report, which recommended a universal health insurance plan. He said the way names of the executive committee members were used in the report "bordered upon sharp practice."

Of the report itself, Hawley said: "The large part of its contents is true; and this tends to obscure the downright lies with which it is interlarded at strategic points."

Hawley said Ewing made the "false" inference that 325,000 persons die yearly because of lack of medical care.

Senate Gets Low-Income Housing Bill

By the United Press

A bill calling for a one-million-home public housing program, under which the authors claim low-income families could rent for as little as $13 a month, was introduced yesterday by Republican Senators Harry P. Cain (Wash.) and John W. Bricker (Ohio).

The bill also would let occupants buy $7000 homes for only $3500, with the Federal Government pay-25 per cent of the rest, and State and local governments 12½ per cent each.

Cain said the program would cost the Federal Government $1,-500,000,000 but would lop 14 billion dollars off the Administration program to build 1,050,000 housing units over a 7-year period.

A bill to liberalize loans to middle income groups for home building also was introduced by Republican Senators Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), Charles W. Tobey (N. H.), and Irving M. Ives (N. Y.).

It would authorize loans to veteran housing cooperatives and other nonprofit groups to build 60,000 housing units a year for families in the $2000 to $3000 income group. Flanders said it was a supplement to the long-range housing bill introduced last week by 14 GOP members.

Under the Cain-Bricker bill, occupants of the housing units would be limited to the lowest 20 per cent of a community's income group and rents would ranbge from $13 to $30 a month.

Report of Lieutenant's Death Was Greatly Exaggerated

A goodly portion of the Metropolitan Police Department was thrown into a tizzy recently by a reporter's inquiry into the death of "Lieut. Joseph D. Moynihan, former hack inspector."

Nobody in the department could recall a hack inspector by that name, and the official records also failed to shed any light on the mystery.

But now that WTOP's Glen Taylor has told me what occasioned the query, I think it's pretty funny.

It seems that a reporter for one of our afternoon contemporaries teaches a journalism class at George Washington University. One of his assignments to the class was to write an obituary of a mythical "Lieut. Joseph D. Moynihan, former hack inspector."

Everybody in the class turned in his work on time except one pupil, who arranged to mail his homework the next day. True to his word he did mail it to his reporter-teacher—at the latter's place of employment.

But the "obituary" was routed to the city desk, and the next thing anybody knew, the Metropolitan Police records were being searched for information about the departed Lieutenant Moynihan.

Henceforth, the journalism students will turn in their homework in person.

BUT THE KIDS LOVE IT

With sculpture white as chalk.

MISCELLANY

Here's another pat-on-the-back for our hackers, this one from Tom Wrigley, who has been working on the Mile of Dimes campaign. When Poster Girl Linda Brown visited here, she needed a cab to take her from one public appearance to another. Mike Singer, chief dispatcher for the Diamond Cab Co., showed up in a brand new hack and saw to it that Linda made every appointment in her crowded schedule. At the end of the day, the cab fare was "not a cent"—not even a tip . . . Speaking of hackers, Irving Schlaifer (Gray Line Cab No. 3) of 1364 Girard st. nw. agrees with me that cabbies who ignore group riding rules are driving prospective patrons to streetcars and buses. He's trying to get legislation to change present rates, so that a driver who is bringing somebody in from the third or fourth zone can pick up another passenger in the first zone without losing money on the deal, as he does now . . . Marian Westover of 4307 Russell ave., Mount Rainier, Md., raises an eyebrow at our sports department's recent statement that "Tanenbaum dropped in his free throw, bringing the Cap lead down to one point—74 to 13" . . . A Bethesda theater operator needs a proofreader for his marquee. He recently offered: "San Fransisco" . . . Shirley Lee of 1100 Oakdale dr., Hyattsville, Md., is intrigued by an ad in a Pittsburgh paper that offers "1949 Hudson, only $10.95" . . . Wonder how much of that they'd expect in cash?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Why does everybody think of a newspaper carrier as a little boy?

Except for time off for Army service, I have been a carrier for the past nine years. I am 21 years old and a junior at George Washington University—and some carriers are older than I am.

I serve The Washington Post in Buckingham and make more money for fewer hours of work than if I took a part-time job after my classes are over in the afternoon. I serve 300 subscribers and am never finished later than 6:45 a. m.

The people in Buckingham are the best customers in the world, and I wouldn't trade routes with anybody.

However I would like to add a word about the complaints you've been discussing.

We don't mind putting the paper where the subscriber wants it put. You don't have to "complain" to get service; just tell us.

But you'll find that the chronic complainers are usually the hardest to collect from at the end of the month.

William A. Baker, jr.
Arlington, Va.

Dear Bill:

Well stated, and a wonderful testimonial for our circulation department. Just between you and me—did they pay you for it?

Seriously, Bill, more than one circulation director on our metropolitan dailies started out as a part-time carrier, and liked the work so much he stayed in it and went right to the top.

Some of them even got so rich at it they could afford to let their sons become reporters. Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

E. J. Welch, superintendent, Lorton Reformatory: I have a package of new phonograph records for your wards, donated by the Hollywood Record Co., 1006 7th st. nw. They can be picked up in my office.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

After all those snow warnings we got, I wonder how many of us ever got around to putting a sack of sand in the car?

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air. Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Robert Edmond Jones, the designer and director, lectured at the Actors Studio and suggested that if customers at the theater disliked the play they should have the right to express their displeasure by shouting, "There's no glory in this, no glory at all" . . . David Wayne, of "Mr. Roberts," went to Lindy's later and there saw Robert Morley, of "Edward, My Son." He told Morley of Jones' suggestion and asked what he thought of it . . . "It would be quite all right with me if they shouted such things at any of my shows," replied author-star Morley, "but they certainly wouldn't get their money back."

Al Furth, the executive editor of Fortune magazine, contributed some money to a European relief agency. He received a letter of thanks from a widow in Germany who had learned, from the agency, of his contribution. And to express her gratitude, she wrote: "I am sending you one of my wedding gifts—something which should have great value in America"—a copy of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" . . .

Former Senator Hatch, who introduced the Hatch Act limiting political contributions to $5000, now has become a Federal judge. Before he left the Senate he met Phillips of Phillips Petroleum, who said: "I'm grateful to you. The Hatch Act has saved me a fortune" . . . Eric Johnston has just postponed the Anglo-American film meetings for several months. J. Arthur Rank and Sir Alexander Korda were scheduled to arrive here next month for this session.

Cole Porter, who is about to work on a musical version of "Amphytrion, 38, "tells of the Lunts' tour in this play. Charles Washburn, the press agent, was in their room when a visitor asked them to describe the show. Alfred Lunt invited Washburn to make the reply . . . "It's about a guy who makes a pass at a dame," said Washburn . . . The visitor asked: "But in what way is this different from others? . . . "Washburn said: "There's a big difference. Here we do it with a harp in the orchestra."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Webb Had Several Lush Offers

By Drew Pearson

Not many people know it, but President Truman had a hard time persuading Jimmy Webb, then Director of the Budget, to become Undersecretary of State.

Webb

Webb, whose job of whittling down the budget, is one of the toughest in the Government, had received several lush offers to return to private business. Tom Morgan, head of Sperry Gyroscope, offered him $35,000. Clay Williams of Reynolds Tobacco, made him an equally attractive offer, while a big chemical company in New York also put in a bid.

However, the job which appealed to Webb most would have paid him much less. It came from an old friend whom Webb greatly respected, Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina. While Graham was in the Dutch East Indies trying to iron out the Indonesian civil war, he scribbled a note in long hand to Webb asking him to become dean of the North Carolina School of Business.

The salary was about half what private firms offered him—$15,000. But this was the job Webb was planning to take when President Truman finally persuaded him to become Undersecretary of State.

Along the Avenue

President Truman, who always sports a neat crease in his trousers, won't stand for a crease in his coat sleeves. Always an expert on men's haberdashery, he believes in a smooth, rounded sleeve—no wrinkles and no crease. . . . One artist, who did a portrait of the President, was requested by the Chief Executive to "kindly paint out those creases in the sleeves." . . . The President dictates so fast that his confidential secretary, Rose Conway, has abandoned shorthand and now uses a stenotype machine to keep up with her boss . . . Back in the 1890s the great Polish patriot-pianist, Jan Ignace Paderewski, paid a visit to Independence, Mo. While there, he took time out to give a piano lesson to an awe-struck youngster named Harry Truman. Later Paderewski became President of Poland and his piano pupil became President of the United States . . . One of the biggest guessing games in Washington revolves around the question of why Ed Bacher, executive director of the Republican National Committee, has a machine attached to his telephone to record conversations. It's generally agreed he's not trying to catch Democrats off guard. Beyond that, it's anybody's guess.

Man Bites Dog

Believe it or not, a butter producer is now lobbying for oleomargarine—not against it. Senators are blinking their eyes over a letter which Kingsdale Dairies of New York City is circulating on Capitol Hill.

Under a letterhead advertising "for bettering the buttering habits of the Nation," Kingsdale Dairies confesses: "While we have a vital interest in butter, we believe we have nothing to fear from the removal of the oleomargarine taxes nor even from the removal of color restrictions—provided, of course, the margarine is not fraudulently foisted on the American people as butter. We feel that the danger of such fraud is small.

"That a large segment of the American people want oleomargarine needs no demonstration, and that they want it colored is now amply evidenced by their demand, at extra cost, for the new type bag which permits easy coloring by the housewife.

"To favor one industry by restricting another is not in our opinion compatible with democracy nor is it in the best interest of all business as a whole, or of the American people.

"We respectfully urge your support on any legislation that will free oleomargarine from its present restrictions."

Ball's Censorship

The Democrats are about to take the wraps off a report that was kept in mothballs while the Republicans were still in power on Capitol Hill.

It is a survey on how the Tennessee Valley Authority has been getting along with labor. The Republicans intended it to be an unfavorable report and sent an investigator into the Tennessee Valley looking for trouble. Instead, the agent found TVA humming and labor putting its shoulder to the wheel.

The man who initiated this investigation and tried to blast TVA was former Senator Joe Ball of Minnesota and former chairman of the Joint Labor-Management Relations Committee. He ordered Staff Investigator Alexander Christie to turn TVA upside down and bring back the facts. That's exactly what Christie did. But when his report turned out to be a boomerang, praising TVA instead of knocking it, Ball let the report gather dust on his shelf.

Whereupon Christie burned up, showed the report to Democratic Senator James Murray of Montana, who has now promised publication.

Meanwhile, this column has already obtained a copy, which painstakingly goes into TVA's labor problems. Summing up, the report declares: "The Tennessee Valley Authority has been in existence over 15 years and during that period its relations with labor have been relatively free of strife and discord. . . .

"There is nothing in the labor policies of TVA that smacks of paternalism. The Authority is out to receive value for every dollar it spends. It . . . constantly strives for economical and efficient operation. . . .

"TVA believes that by treating its employes as human beings, honestly and above-board, by having the employes express themselves and take part in the joint cooperative committees, by letting individual employes join unions if they so desire, by giving the individual some recognition—he is not just another cog in a heartless, impersonal machine. . . .

"TVA has proved that it wants to get along with labor—all other factors are of secondary importance to this one. Labor knows these things. Therefore, it cooperates with TVA, it works hard and it produces."
